FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

Office of Naval Material
BY VICE ADM. A. G. NOBLE, USN

THE Office of Naval Material was evolved from the experience of World War II. Very early in the war the need for an organization to provide policy direction and coordination of the procurement and production problems of the Navy became evident. As a result thereof, the Secretary of the Navy established the Office of Procurement and Material with the assigned mission to coordinate the efforts of the various bureaus of the Navy Department in the procurement, production, and inspection of the Navy's huge wartime materiel program and further, to act as a clearing house and spokesman for the Secretary of the Navy in dealing with other Government Agencies in connection with the Navy's materiel requirements.

Vice Adm. Noble

Based upon this wartime experience and subsequent peacetime need, legislation was proposed and enacted into law on March 5, 1948 with the President's approval of Public Law 432, 80th Congress which gave legislative sanction to these functions. Thus, the Chief of Naval Material became the statutory custodian of the wartime responsibilities of the Office of Procurement and Material.

The Office of Naval Material, the Bureaus and the Marine Corps are integral parts of the team which supplies the materiel requirements of the Chief of Naval Operations. As stated above, the Office of Naval Material acts as a coordinator of the procurement, production, and inspection functions of the Navy's materiel program. The development, design, procurement, and distribution of material and supplies are the functions of the Bureaus, i.e., Bureau of Aeronautics, Bureau of Ordnance, Bureau of Ships, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, and Bureau of Yards and Docks, and of the Marine Corps.

Since the end of World War II and until the Korean situation, the interests of the Chief of Naval Material were primarily those of effectuating policies of procurement and contracting and providing the guidance and direction to the bureaus and offices of the Navy Department in industrial mobilization planning. However, since the development of the Korean situation and the subsequent declaration of the National Emergency by the President, the efforts of the Office

Honor Code Breach Strikes 90 Cadets

Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving, USA, Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy, announced with "deepest regret" on 3 Aug. that approximately 90 members of the Corps of Cadets face discharge because of a "serious breach of the West Point Code of Honor."

In Washington, Secretary of the Army Pace issued a statement simultaneously in which he declared that "the great value of West Point to the Army and to the Nation rests on the unwavering integrity and character of its graduates."

"I feel that there can be no compromise in the maintenance of the high standards of conduct on which West Point was founded," Secretary Pace asserted.

Across the Nation and particularly among West Point graduates serving around the world, the news of mass violations in the Corps of Cadets' famed Code of Conduct came as a serious shock.

On Capitol Hill, reactions were varied. Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee said he was satisfied to have West Point and Department of the Army officials handle the matter alone. Other legislators called for a Congressional inquiry.

Some Congressmen bitterly assailed the athletic program at the Academy, particularly with regard to football. Although names of those involved in the violations were not made public, it became known that many of the Cadets to be discharged are members of the powerful Academy football team.

Late this week, Coach Earl (Red) Blaik, the man responsible for building Army teams for the last ten years, announced that he will stay on as coach at the Academy, although it appeared likely that the West Point team has been depleted to a point where it will be difficult to field a team of any consequence.

Earlier, Blaik had defended the practice of recruiting team members, a revelation which came as a result of the scandal. He conceded that the Academy had recruited from five to 11 high school players annually but said the practice, enjoyed by most major colleges, was "perfectly proper."

One Senator, John J. Sparkman (D-Ala.), held that both West Point and Annapolis should be abolished. He said the Armed Forces could obtain all their young officers from ROTC programs. Some Congressmen said the Army was being too tough with the Cadets; others held that the violators should be dishonorably discharged.

Following is the text of the statement released at West Point:

"West Point, N. Y., Aug. 3—Major General Frederick A. Irving, Superintendent, United States Military Academy, announced today that there has been a serious breach of the West Point Code of Honor involving approximately ninety members of the Corps of Cadets. Final action is being taken under the direction of the Superintendent with a

Income Tax Exemption

Senator George (D-Ga.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, told THE JOURNAL this week that his committee will probably take up at its meeting next Monday, 13 Aug., the proposed income tax exemptions for Armed Service personnel.

Chairman George had just returned from about a three-week visit to Georgia and is preparing to push the executive sessions of his committee in preparing a final version of the tax bill they will report to the Senate.

Before the Committee was two proposals for providing measures of tax relief to members of the Services. The first one was introduced by Senator Lehman (D-NY), in association with four others. This bill would give a $600 a year exemption plus $100 for each dependent other than spouse.

The other bill was introduced by Senator McFarland (D-Ariz.), majority leader of the Senate. It would reestablish the $1,500 a year special military exemption given during the war and up until the enactment of the Career Compensation bill.

Rotation Plans Told; Families to FE in Nov.

Coincidental with the receipt by THE JOURNAL of a letter from General Matthew B. Ridgway in which the Far East Commander declares his intention to alleviate the forced separation of families "just as soon as conditions justify," his headquarters in Tokyo has told of plans to reinstitute rotation from the Far East beginning on 1 Sept. and limited movement of dependents to that area in November.

And in Washington, the Army on 4 Aug. declared that limited rotation of personnel now on foreign service tours will be resumed in September. It was stated that each overseas commander will formulate rotation criteria for his personnel. Generally, rotation will go first to those longest overseas on current tours.

The Army emphasized that the rate at which the program can be sustained will depend on the availability of replacements. Shortly after the outbreak of the Korean conflict the Army extended foreign service tours for six months in order to conserve shipping space and to reduce the turnover of trained personnel in units. Subsequently the Army directed a second six months' extension.

In an announcement at Tokyo, the Far East Command said that dependents will be permitted to go to Japan in limited numbers beginning in November.

The number and rate of movement of service families will depend upon housing and shipping conditions, FEC Headquarters pointed out, and priority will be based on length of separation from families.

Headquarters said that improved trans-

House Acts to Limit Service Retirements

The House of Representatives this week voted to cut off retirement pay for service personnel hereafter retired for reasons other than old age or disability, as debate began on the largest peacetime military appropriation in the House's history.

Despite the size of the $56 billion bill, it does not include the expenses of the Korean war since 30 June nor the nearly $6 billions necessary to carry out the construction bill now being authorized.

The Appropriations Committee report on the bill included "a note of caution with respect to military promotion policies and suggests a study be made to determine a proper policy in keeping with merit and responsibility," adding that "there should be no piling up of top grades in excessive numbers."

Before the House action on retirement pay, the Appropriations Committee reported that it felt "more careful scrutiny should be given to requests for retirement of persons who have not reached the legal age limit for retirement."

The House passed the bill and sent it to the Senate after approving by a standing vote of 81-71, an amendment by Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa) which denies retirement pay to those who retire at their own request before reaching mandatory age or before they are disabled. The proviso states: "That no part of such sum shall be used to pay the retired or retirement pay of any member of the regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps or Air Force who is retired after the date of enactment of this Act, unless such member was retired because of (1) being unable to perform the duties of his office, rank, grade or rating by reason of a physical disability incurred in line of duty, or (2) achieving the age at which retirement is required by law."

Representative George H. Mahon (D-Tex.), chairman of the Appropriations Committee opposed the amendment. He said the matter should be considered fully by the Armed Services Committee, and pointed out that appropriations for retirement funds had already been cut from $360,000,000 to $345,000,000 in an effort to hold down retirements.

Before reporting the complete bill to the House, the committee lopped $1,542,608,500 from the estimates submitted by the President and the Bureau of the Budget. As reported out the bill provides:

For the Army—$20,113,524,200, which is $849,372,057 more than last year and $685,321,500 less than the estimates. Largest cuts included $100,000,000 from "expediting production," $308,511,000 from Ordnance, service and supplies, and $172,351,000 from Quartermaster Corps.

For the Navy—$15,534,648,000, which is $3,081,573,700 more than last year and $194,272,000 less than the budget estimates. Largest cuts were $67,972,000

Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette—"A survey of available housing in the vicinity of camps to which thousands of service men were to be shipped would have put the Defense Department on guard against the occurrence of the situation that has now made headlines. Studies of training areas still being planned should be undertaken to prevent similar developments in the future."

Wilmington (Del.) Morning News—"Whatever else Congress does, it should take such steps as are open to it to keep selfish civilians from thus victimizing the defenders of the country."

Houston (Tex.) Post—"Having gone into one aspect of the matter, the committee should go a bit further and get facts from which a corrective policy might be evolved. . . . Some of the public housing funds, or a part of the foreign aid money, might well be diverted to this purpose."

Newark News—"A similar report will be issued with reference to Army camps in Indiana, Virginia, and South Carolina, and the subcommittee is considering visits to Ft. Dix in this state and to Ft. Devens and Camp Evans in Massachusetts. By all means let it come North. If comparable conditions are found, the sooner they are cleaned up and remedies are applied the better."

Providence (R.I.) Journal—"... fortunate it is that the average soldier is not a philosopher, else he might stand outside the henhouse where his wife and children live at $50 a month and decide that home isn't worth risking his life on the field of battle for."

Kansas City Star—"The hundreds of thousands of men required for the expanded defense program are entitled to every consideration for themselves and their families. Congress and the Defense Department will be expected to see that they get it in the form of decent family housing at rentals they can afford to pay."

Memphis Commercial Appeal—"Alert camp commanders should have demanded remedial action long ago and public explanation is due as to why such conditions have been tolerated so long. Any commander who would permit personnel to live in the type of housing described by the committee has disqualified himself for command."

Asheville (N.C.) Citizen—"Temporary housing can and should be erected in the areas where private dwelling conditions are unsatisfactory. Congress in 1949 passed the Wherry bill which provided for a $500 million insurance fund to stimulate construction of rental housing for service personnel by private industry. What has happened to this program?"

Birmingham (Ala.) Post-Herald—"... near Camp Rucker in Alabama are Ozark and Enterprise ... Mayor Douglas Brown of Ozark ... says that the federal government has taken no steps to help his city ... meet the emergency housing demands."

Flint (Mich.) Journal—"... a soldier who is forced to pay exorbitant rent for such rat-trap housing ... cannot be expected to do a good job of soldiering. ... There is a solution to this problem. Perhaps the subcommittee will come up with it. The sooner the better."

THE WAR IN KOREA

THERE was a slight increase in ground fighting in Korea this week, but for the most part land operations continued to be characterized by relatively minor patrol clashes, with no important changes in the positions of the opposing forces.

Allied reconnaissance elements probing enemy lines northwest of Chorwon encountered stubborn resistance. An enemy counter-attack in this area was repulsed after several hours of sharp fighting. There was also considerable activity in the vicinity of Pyonggang and north and northeast of Kumwha. Allied patrols re-entered Pyonggang, the apex of the former so-called Iron Triangle, without encountering enemy opposition. Near Kumwha the Allies seized a commanding hill position. Elsewhere along the front there was only light patrol action.

A feature of this week's ground fighting was the greater employment of artillery by the enemy, indicating a substantial increase in guns and ammunition. During most of the operations in Korea the Chinese Reds have been conspicuously lacking in artillery, but in recent weeks there have been indications that this deficiency was being remedied, probably with the arrival of additional artillery weapons from Russia.

United Nations sea and air operations continued to be directed mainly against enemy lines of communications. Gunfire from Allied warships and attacks by Air Force, Navy and Marine planes greatly hampered enemy rail and highway movements, particularly over the important east coast communications network. Rail lines were cut in several places, forcing the Reds to advance their supplies to the front by short shuttle movements.

Air Action

Rail and fog reduced, but did not eliminate, air operations. There was some close air support of ground troops, but most of the attacks were directed against enemy rear areas, North Korean airfields, supply dumps, lines of communications and highway traffic. Enemy air activity during the week was almost negligible. Two or three enemy planes dropped a few bombs through the clouds behind Allied lines, but inflicted no appreciable damage.

The latest estimate of the Department of the Army places enemy casualties from the beginning of the war on 25 June 1950 through 23 July 1951, approximately 13 months, at 1,228,954. This is an increase of 7,420 over the last previous estimate, which covered the period of the war through 19 July, or nearly 2,000 a day for the additional four days.

Of the total enemy casualties 617,789 were sustained by the North Koreans and 611,065 by the Chinese Reds. Of the North Korean losses 375,454 were battle casualties, 95,194 were sick and injured, and 147,141 were prisoners of war. The Chinese casualties included 511,151 killed and wounded, 82,289 non-battle losses, and 17,625 prisoners of war.

American battle casualties in the Korean war, officially reported to the next of kin through 3 August 1951, total 80,430. This is an increase of only 351 over the total reported a week earlier, and reflects the light ground action at the front. It does not include losses of South Korean or other Allied units, nor does it include non-battle casualties. The high rate of enemy battle casualties compared with American losses is due in part at least to the heavy toll taken by Allied sea and air attacks, which have not decreased in intensity, though there has been a lull in the ground fighting since the armistice talks began at Kaesong.

On the western end of the battle line the fighting this week was particularly light. Eighth Army patrols in the area north and northwest of Korangpo-ri engaged enemy groups of squad and platoon size. Light enemy contact was reported northwest of Yonchon by United Nations patrols.

There was sharp local fighting west of Charwon, where an Allied patrol came under enemy small arms, automatic weapons and artillery fire. The enemy forces were engaged by Allied air and artillery, which inflicted heavy casualties. Subsequently the enemy launched a sustained counter-attack, supported by a heavy volume of automatic weapons and artillery fire. After several hours the enemy assault was repulsed.

West of Pyonggang a United Nations patrol came under heavy artillery fire and was forced to withdraw. In the same general area and to the southeast of Pyonggang the enemy made several light and inconclusive probing attacks. United Nations patrols moved into Pyonggang and found that town deserted by the Reds.

An enemy company attacked Allied positions southwest of Kumsong, in the vicinity of Kumwha, but the attack was easily repulsed. Later United Nations troops improved their position northeast of Kumwha by storming a dominating hill, which was captured after a sharp engagement.

Light enemy contact was reported as Eighth Army patrols briefly engaged small Red units northeast of Yanggu, and north of Inje. On the east coast Republic of Korea troops, supported by naval gunfire, forced the enemy to withdraw from positions northwest of Kamsong.

Naval and Marine Air

Carrier-borne naval and Marine aircraft provided close support for South Korean advance patrols in the Kosong area and attacked troop concentrations, gun positions, and supply points along the east coast. The U.S. Destroyer Brown supported South Korean troops on the east coast, firing 5-inch shells on enemy troops and command posts during call fire missions.

The steady bombardment of the enemy-held east coast port of Wonsan continued throughout the week. Led by the U.S. Heavy Cruiser Toledo the Allied bombardment warships knocked out at least five enemy shore artillery positions. Troops and supply points were also hit.

The U.S. Destroyer-Minesweepers Carmick and Thompson ranged southward from Chongjin to Songjin, along the east coast, shelling transportation routes. The Carmick destroyed several sampans southeast of Nanam. The U.S. Destroyer Sieverling attacked bridges and railroads at Songjin.

On the west coast British, Australian and Netherlands destroyers and frigates bombarded enemy positions at Haeju and near the mouth of the Han River. Positions in the Majimpuri area and west of Chinnampo and southwest of Ullul were also hit.

Navy pilots from the U.S. Heavy Carriers Princeton and Boxer wrecked nine bridges and damaged four others between Wonsan and Hamhung. Navy fighter and bomber planes knocked out numerous gun positions, barracks, warehouses and supply dumps.

Marine Corsairs launched from the U. S. Escort Carrier Sicily, off the west coast, pounded enemy targets between Haeju and Chinnampo, knocking out scores of enemy-occupied buildings and blasting rail bridges.

Air Force planes plowed through fog and murky skies much of the week to deliver heavy attacks on enemy troops, installations, and transportation facilities. In spite of generally bad weather the airmen flew hundreds of combat missions almost every day.

Napalm and strafing air attacks inflicted hundreds of casualties on the enemy in the central sector of the Korean battle line, as propeller-driven F-51 Mustang fighters flew beneath low clouds to make their strikes on Red positions between Pyonggang and Kumsong.

Fifth Air Force planes and attached Australian, South African and shore-based Marine aircraft continued the campaign of interdicting supply lines. F-80 Shooting Star jets struck marshalling yards south of Kunu-ri and Pyongyang in Western Korea, while Mustangs hit supply buildings near Sibyon-ni and Sinmak.

Marine planes, operating under the control of the Fifth Air Force, struck the marshalling yard at Anbyon, south of Wonsan, on the east coast, and bombed bridges, rail lines, and tunnel entrances. F-86 Sabre Jets escorted medium bombers, and fast Australian Meteors made fighter sweeps, but encountered no enemy aircraft.

Using radar aiming technique to bomb through the clouds, all-weather B-29 Superforts attacked a variety of enemy targets. A large secondary explosion followed a strike at the marshalling yard at Samdong-ni on the trans-peninsular rail line. Nearly 600 100-lb. bombs were dropped on the enemy airfield at Pyong-ni in Western Korea. Other Superforts attacked a supply area near Hungnam on the east coast. Bridges, barracks, and rail lines were hit near Sinmak and Kyomipo.

Night attacks were made on enemy airfields in Western Korea by B-26 light bombers using radar. Other B-26s and Marine planes made night raids on enemy military road traffic. Light bombers also dropped 500-lb. air-bursting bombs on enemy front-line troops.

THE EUROPEAN THEATER

Paris—The five-day return of Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther to Washington for brief testimony before Congressional committees was the simplest possible method of providing concise explicit answers to such uncertainties as may exist in America about (1) the progress made thus far in the rearming of western Europe and (2) the requirements for continuing that progress. There is no better informed person on these subjects than General Eisenhower's Chief of Staff and no more satisfying witness with a phenomenal memory for detail and an equally impressive power of attending to the fundamental issues and their significance.

The Congress is in a particularly favorable position this time to examine relevant information; ten of the thirteen members of the Senate's Foreign Relations committee and a useful scattering of members from the House committees on Foreign Affairs, Armed Services, and Appropriations have just been over here making their own first hand inquiry; members of both parties appeared favorably impressed by their extended but necessarily swift survey, and this week's opportunity to support their own views with General Gruenther's factual recital, for their colleagues' study is gratifying.

Progress is better measurable over a longish period than from day to day. Accordingly one who was here when Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers in Europe was being organized in January is more struck by the progress to date. There is the regular attendance at SHAPE. There are material aspects in plenty which are subject to measurement. One thinks, for instance, of the increased number of units, and still more of the increases within these units, and still more of the increased efficiency of those units which comes from familiarity with new weapons and from close contact in training. One thinks too of the longer terms of national service, which have been decreed by nine of the European nations, (Britain's increase to 24 months came before ours did) and the prospect of further extensions in coming months. One thinks of greatly increased military budgets, with some of our allies providing a larger amount in relation to their own national incomes than we do. One thinks of greatly bettered domestic economies, from which spring not only greater powers of self-taxation for military purposes but better living standards which in our democracies must lead toward more solid nationalisms and more reliable troops. One thinks of the marked changes in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's armed camps such as come from such an integration of nationalisms as never before has been seen in peace, and of such substantial command structures as were predicted only by optimists a few months ago, but which now are realities in substance, and beginning to be impressive as to size.

Beyond all this, partly cause and partly effect, stepping along pari passu with the material progress referred to, is a thing which—if we remember Napoleon's dictum about the importance of an army's spirit—is almost the most striking thing of all. That is the high confidence which one encounters today, and which one certainly did not encounter last January. Then in western Europe there was something close to defeatism in the spirit of several of our Allies. Every one of Europe's western nations was still deep in the post-war slough; all had suffered staggering losses of one sort or another during the war; none had regained its economic strength; none therefore could spare from its daily struggle for existence enough resources to put into rearming; almost all were in a sort of hypnosis with regard to Russia's power and in a state of nerves with regard to internal security.

Today there is unmistakable evidence of the material progress as previously recited; and with it there is a manifest, revival of courage and confidence in the future. The combined forces are still small, but we know they will be larger and so do our Allies. Without going quite so far in optimism as do some of the recent press dispatches from western Germany, one can say unhesitatingly that the defeatism of last January no longer meets the eye each hour of the day. There is instead a sort of amazement among the Europeans one encounters, that they can stand erect, and provide for more defense forces than last year, and still live better; that no longer is it "obvious" that Russia could walk at will to the Channel; that no longer is this remarkable confederation of twelve nations a "fantasy" for it has become a respectable reality; that even the proposed European Army, with West Germans integrated with Frenchmen, and the economic union with German industrial production pooled with others', is now endorsed not by dreamers but by notably practical people.

What has produced all this change? To what extent is it Marshall Plan and Mutual Defense contributions, or ECA with its invaluable support of internal rebuilding, or SHAPE itself? All have their responsibility, but in the lifting of the spirit of men it will be difficult to find any factor more potent than General Eisenhower's own electric influence. His own confidence has never flagged. His patience has never waned. His understanding of causes and his willingness to tolerate the tolerable and to insist only on men and nations doing the best within their powers supply a lesson for diplomats and administrators as well as military chiefs. His example is a stimulus to nations which need new courage and to colleagues who need new patience. The latter are acquiring it too—or else!

As a result SHAPE itself provides an astonishing example of complete integration of various nationalities and various services as well, such as we never saw at Algiers or even at SHAEP in 1945. Its numbers are kept down, as one of the staff officers observed wily at the end of a day, to the number who by maximum exertion can take care of a normal day; the officers of all services are still about 220 as was the original design; they will mount pretty soon because of the increasing requirements in logistics planning in particular, but they will not increase much. It is one way, arduous but effective, to maintain individual efficiency.

We will be hearing more of the European Army, which a few months ago seemed so hazy a dream. The American understanding of the proposal has suffered somewhat by a desire for precision and finite terms, and our national passion for an initial working out of known means in steady progression toward the end. It is safer in this instance and at this early stage to look first at the objective, which is simply the building-up of a sturdy, integrated, and permanent defense in the west. The French, who are not given to a lack of realism, hold that there can be no such thing without a voluntary participation of West Germans in a military as well as an economic European unity. An impressive number of West Germans agree. The Low Countries, which for generations have feared only one invasion—from the East—certainly yearn for that security. General Eisenhower's own hearty oral support of the proposal is manifestly an earnest of favorable disposition, and it is unfortunate only that a hasty and very inaccurate report of his views dealt with the "one uniform, one flag" notion instead of with the important reality—namely that a tactical unity of command for such forces seems a genuine possibility at some time in the future.

The prime requirement of course is the German treaty, toward which the Council of Foreign Ministers is now quite clearly headed. Equal sovereignty and likeness of treatment for all participants in the West's defense is undeniable; with that as a starter one dares hope for developments which six months ago would have been unthinkable. For that matter, who would have dared say, somewhat earlier in our past, that SHAPE and an integrated command for 12 nations (which we have today) were conceivable?

Immense events await the passage of the Mutual Defense Pact budget. Simply stated, western European nations have in their power the supply of training personnel and the payment of subsistence. But these two essentials must be balanced against material for equipping of the troops, which is in America's power. Without the third factor in appropriate balance, the full presence of the first two factors is ineffective. This means that if the $5,300 million aid to Europe is cut, Europe's provision of divisions and air formations must also be cut. American aid remains at the heart of western defense's program, and that program is at the heart of our own grand-scale defense policy for years to come.

Marine Corps Bill

Chairman Vinson of the House Committee on Armed Services expressed his determination this week to get the Marine Corps expansion bill before the House for a vote. The bill sets a floor of 300,000 and a ceiling of 400,000 on the Marine Corps strength and makes its commandant a permanent full-fledged member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The bill was reported out of the Committee on 26 June by a vote of 26 to 1. Mr. Vinson immediately introduced a resolution for a rule to give it right-of-way on the floor of the House, but the Rules Committee has not acted upon his request for a hearing.

Mr. Vinson told his committee this week that he will make further attempts to secure a rule on the bill, but that if that fails he will ask the Speaker of the House to observe a Calendar Wednesday for his committee which would then give him the right to call up the Marine Corps bill on the floor. Mr. Vinson did not say so, but associates stated that he was also considering the idea of seeking to discharge the Rules Committee from consideration of his resolution.

There is talk that the Rules Committee has been influenced in its inaction by representatives of the White House, Bureau of the Budget, Joint Chiefs of Staff or Department of Defense, all of whom are opposed to the Marine Corps bill. It is generally recognized that if the bill can be brought to a vote it will be passed in spite of administration opposition.

Defense Housing Act

The Defense Housing Act, which offers some hope of relieving the shortage of family dwellings near service posts, was reported out of the House Committee on Banking and Currency this week.

Under the Act, already passed by the Senate, special incentives are offered private builders in the way of relief from credit restrictions and the provision of mortgage insurance aids. If such incentives do not attract private construction to fill the needs for defense and military personnel, then provision is made for the construction of the needed dwellings by the government.

Unlike the Wherry Act, the proposed act would not be restricted to permanent military installations, but would apply to any areas determined by the President to be "critical defense housing areas."

Dwellings to be built by the government would be limited to $9,000, $10,000 and $11,000 for two, three, and four bedroom family dwelling units including land and site developments. Fair rentals based on the value would be set by the President.

Navy Housing

Housing at 74 Navy and Marine Corps bases will undergo major repairs and rehabilitation during the next 12 months.

The Navy, it was revealed in recent appropriations hearings, plans to spend almost five million dollars on the program which is the first major repair work done on the housing in ten years. In addition, $5,237,352 will be spent on the maintenance and operation of the buildings.

For the most part the repair and rehabilitation work will consist of roof repairs, drainage control, exterior painting, boiler repairs, replaced flooring, replaced heating, and correction of electrical conduits.

Testifying before a House subcommittee, Rear Adm. Joseph F. Jelley, Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Yards and Docks said: "We have not had funds to take care of the repairs of these quarters for the past several years. . . . We need structural repairs for foundations, repairs to wooden porches, repairs to wooden windows and doorsills, replacement of ranges, hot-water heaters, and hot-water tanks that were purchased and installed during the war with substitute materials."

He said that a "particularly heavy program of repair of space heaters will be necessary" as well as "quite a few replacements of plumbing fixtures."

Boost Commissary Costs

Tacked onto the Military Appropriation bill reported to the House this week by its Appropriations Committee was an amendment prohibiting the use of government funds for any direct expenses in connection with the maintenance, conduct, or operation of sales commissaries, or commissary stores.

The effect of this amendment, the Department estimates, would be to increase food prices to service personnel and their families by a median of about 13 percent and a maximum of 18.3 percent.

The amendment is the brain child of the Bureau of the Budget, which also had a hand in previous actions increasing prices at service exchanges and sharply limiting the goods and materials in which they could deal. It is understood that it was included in the measure over sharp protests from the Department of Defense.

Text of the amendment follows:
Sec. 628. No appropriation contained in this Act shall be available for any direct expense (including commercial transportation in the United States to the place of sale but excluding all transportation outside the United States) in connection with the maintenance, conduct, operation, or management of sales commissaries, or commissary stores, of agencies of the Department of Defense, except where reimbursement for such expenses is to be made, in accordance with regulations approved by the Secretary of Defense, to the appropriations concerned from the proceeds of sales therein: Provided, That hereafter the proviso under the head "Subsistence of the Army," in the Army Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1885, shall not apply to sales by sales commissaries or commissary stores and such sales shall not be made at prices insufficient to cover the direct expenses of said activities and the cost of articles sold: Provided further, That, under unusual or extraordinary circumstances, the cost of pay and allowances of military personnel may, in the discretion of the Secretary of Defense, be excluded from the reimbursements required under this section. (Defense Appropriation Act, 1951; Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1951; Second Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1951.)

Letters to Congress

Defense Secretary Marshall has revealed in a recent letter that the Defense Department is making a study to determine how to revise regulations regarding the freedom of Armed Forces personnel to communicate with Congress.

A proviso in the new UMT law was brought to the attention of the Defense Secretary by Representative Jacob K. Javits (R-N. Y.). It states that "No member of the Armed Forces shall be restricted or prevented from communicating directly or indirectly with any Member or Members of Congress concerning any subject unless such communication is in violation of law, or in violation of regulations necessary to the security and safety of the United States."

General Marshall said that the regulations now in effect (some of which prescribe the transmittal of such letters through channels) "are now being studied with a view to possible revision." He added that "the propriety of public comments of a member of the military service frequently depends upon the position and assignment of that individual."

Service Postal Clerks

In response to a request from the Department of Defense, Representative Sasser, (D-Md.), has introduced legislation to authorize the Post Office Department to designate enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard as postal clerks and assistant postal clerks.

The proposed legislation would do away with the compulsory bonding requirement in the Army, Air Force and Coast Guard.

Release Reservists

Before passing the Military Appropriation bill this week, the House voted an amendment which would prohibit the use of funds after 1 Nov. 1951 for the payment of Reserve personnel on active duty involuntarily.

This would mean that all reservists called to active duty involuntarily would have to be released by that date.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Warrant Officer Eligibility

The Army has liberalized its policies regarding appointment to warrant officer, junior grade, and now will permit sergeants first class (E-6) with six years service and three months in grade to apply for warrant officer status.

Heretofore, only master sergeants and sergeants first class who served as warrant officers in World War II could apply for appointments.

The decision to broaden the warrant officer source was made because not enough master sergeants were applying to meet quotas. It was noted that most master sergeants would suffer a loss of pay by changing to warrant officers, a point that has been raised in repeated articles and letters published in THE JOURNAL.

Army Enlisted Promotions

The Army has authorized the temporary promotion of enlisted personnel "without regard to local grade vacancies or major command promotion ceilings, under the time-in-grade and/or time-in-service requirements" provided the individual meets certain uniform promotion requirements prescribed in paragraph 3, SR 615-25-50, 2 May 1951.

In Korea, commanders of units, for which a general officer is the assigned or authorized commander, are authorized to promote enlisted personnel one grade without regard to any local grade vacancy or major command ceiling "in recognition of a specific combat action of extraordinary or heroic nature," the Army said.

Military Police Association

A Military Police Association has been organized by members of the Officers Advanced Class No. 4 of The Provost Marshal General's School, Camp Gordon, Ga. Plans are to open the membership to anyone, of any of the services, or anyone else who is interested in police work in the Armed Services.

Maj. Gen. E. P. Parker, USA, The Provost Marshal General, has accepted the honorary presidency and Brig. Gen. W. H. Maglin, USA, Provost Marshal, Eucom, has accepted an honorary vice presidency. Honorary vice presidencies have been offered representatives of the Navy and the Air Force.

The Army has announced that the following Reserve officers have been retired under provisions of Public Law 810. Each officer has a minimum of 20 years' creditable service and each has reached the age of 60.

Begin New Finance Center

Ground-breaking ceremonies at the site of the $23,000,000 Army Finance Center, to be the permanent home of the Army Finance Corps, were held yesterday, 10 Aug., at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, near Indianapolis, Ind.

Maj. Gen. Bickford E. Sawyer, USA, Chief of Finance, delegated to Maj. Gen. Eugene M. Foster, USA-Ret., who was Chief of Finance from 1949 until his retirement 31 May of this year, the honor of turning the first shovel of earth.

"It was during General Foster's tour as Chief of Finance that the new center was planned and approved by Congress," General Sawyer pointed out. "It is only fitting that he have the honor of signaling the start of construction."

It is contemplated that the three-story-and-basement building will require two years for completion. It will cover a little over a million and a half square feet.

The 43d Infantry Division, one of the major tactical units to participate in the joint Army-Air Force Exercise Southern Pine, arrived yesterday at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

The 43d and 28th Infantry Divisions will comprise the bulk of the VII Corps troops. The 82d Airborne Division will join them in certain phases of the exercise. Working in close coordination with these ground elements will be the Ninth Air Force and the maneuver Troop Carrier Command.

In the maneuver, the 43d will come under the command of Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, maneuver director, who was commander of the Division in the Pacific during World War II.

The 43d is commanded by Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer. It has been alerted for movement to Europe this fall to become part of General Eisenhower's forces.

Lt. Col. Ruby F. Bryant has been appointed Assistant Chief of the Army Nurse Corps, replacing Lt. Col. Katherine B. Hayes now assigned to Walter Reed Army Hospital as chief of the Nursing Service. Colonel Bryant was graduated from the Army School of Nursing in 1934 and from the Advanced Medical Department Officer Course, Medical Field Service School Brooke Army Medical Center, in 1948.

Col. Moore Awarded DSC

Col. Ned D. Moore was presented the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism and an Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious service as commander of the 19th Infantry Regiment in Korea, at ceremonies in the Pentagon on 7 Aug.

Presentation of the awards was made by General John E. Hull, Vice Chief of Staff. The two decorations were the eighteenth and nineteenth awards for outstanding combat performance that Colonel Moore has received since he was graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in 1930. Previously he was awarded the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Silver Star, the second cluster to the Distinguished Unit Citation, the Korean Presidential Citation and the star to the Combat Infantry Badge for action in Korea. His World War II decorations include the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with oak leaf cluster, Purple Heart, plus awards for valor from the governments of France, Belgium, and the Netherlands.

Colonel Moore won the Distinguished Service Cross for acts of heroism that inspired his decimated regiment to defeat the spearhead of the 6th North Korean division at the battle of Haman Notch and save the west flank of the Pusan perimeter early in the Korean conflict. At a critical point in this action, Colonel Moore went forward under heavy fire to a point less than 100 yards behind frontline riflemen and personally rallied his out-numbered troops. A few minutes later he reorganized a retreating company and launched a counter-attack that won back key terrain.

Colonel Moore won the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit for his outstanding performance as commander of the 19th Infantry Regiment from 20 July 1950 to 24 Jan. 1951. Assuming command of the regiment in the early days of bitter fighting at Taejon, he molded the unit into an efficient combat force despite loss of personnel, supplies and equipment.

Adm. Pugh Returns

Rear Adm. Lamont Pugh, Surgeon General of the Navy, returned, 8 Aug., to Washington, after a 32-day, 20,000 mile personal inspection tour of Naval Medical facilities in the Pacific Ocean area and Far East, including Korea.

The purpose of Admiral Pugh's trip was to obtain first hand information on existing medical problems of concern to the Navy, as well as to determine whether or not existing facilities in personnel were sufficient to cope with the present situation.

Admiral Pugh was accompanied by Capt. Winnie Gibson, Director of the Navy Nurse Corps, and Lt. Harry Sinclair, (MSC), who served as his aide.

The Surgeon General found morale high among Navy Medical Department personnel wherever he visited and praised the readiness condition of the Navy Medical facilities.

Admiral Pugh said, "Procurement of blood and blood derivatives for use in Armed Forces Medical installations still remains one of the outstanding major problems facing the country today. The use of whole blood and blood derivatives in continental Armed Forces hospitals for treatment of personnel of the Armed Forces, not necessarily Korean casualties, has not decreased. There has been a serious drain on existing stockpiles which require immediate replacement."

The Admiral said the need for whole blood is urgent and appealed to those who have not made a donation of blood to "act now" by contacting their local American Red Cross Chapters.

Navy Unit Commended

The Navy Unit Commendation has been awarded to Special Operations Group, Amphibious Group One, Pacific Fleet, consisting of the USS Horace A. Bass, Underwater Demolition Team One, and Reconnaissance Company (minus) of the First Marine Division, Fleet Marine Force.

Navy Housing Shortage

Navy housing in Southern California and the Phoenix, Ariz., area was reported "critical" this week by the Navy, as a result of expansion "and the subsequent influx of Navy and Marine personnel and their dependents."

In the San Diego area "the housing situation is considered critical everywhere within a 20-mile radius," the Navy said, "including Coronado, National City, Chula Vista, La Mesa, El Cajon and Del Mar. No immediate housing is available for Navy families coming into the area" and "there are long waiting lists for Navy and government-controlled housing."

Similar conditions exist in the Camp Pendleton area "including Oceanside, Carlsbad, Fallbrook, Vista, San Clemente and other neighboring cities."

Other areas included in the critical list were Oxnard-Port Hueneme, Santa Barbara, Santa Paula and Camarillo, El Centro, Inyokern, Barstow and the Phoenix area.

The Bureau of Naval Personnel warns "Personnel ordered to duty in these localities are urged not to bring their dependents until arrangements for housing are made."

Transportation Authority

Introduced this week by Representative Rivers (D-S.C.) at the instance of the Department of Defense is a bill providing authority "for transportation of dependents, baggage, and household goods and effects of certain officers of the Naval service."

The legislation, according to Assistant Secretary Edwards would authorize reimbursement for such transportation "from home to the first duty station in the cases of officers of the United States Navy and United States Marine Corps appointed as officers of the regular Navy and Marine Corps after previous service as Navy or Marine Corps Reserve officers. Officers to be so reimbursed will include only those officers appointed to the regular service during the period from 8 May 1945, to 31 March 1951 inclusive." Current law authorizes such payments for cases since 1 April 1951.

Would Promote Capt. Diehl

To effect the advancement on the retired list of Capt. Walter S. Diehl, USN, retired, to the grade of rear admiral lower half, Representative Sasser (D-Md.) has introduced H.R. 4820.

Explanatory of initiating the legislation, Representative Sasser informed the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL that: "Because of the highly specialized nature of his duties in Aeronautics and applied Aerodynamics, Captain Diehl was limited in opportunity for promotion to the rank of Rear Admiral, which he undoubtedly would have attained in other branches of the service. Since 25 Jan. 1924 he has served as a Navy member of several subcommittees of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. On the date of his retirement he was reappointed in his professional capacity, as an individual, to serve on the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics Subcommittee memberships for the remainder of the calendar year 1951."

Marine Selection Boards

A Marine Corps selection board to pick 496 officers for promotion to captain was convened this week at Marine Corps Headquarters.

At the same time, it was learned, all other Marine boards will be delayed until a firm figure for fiscal 1952 Marine Corps strength can be established. Boards to name officers for promotion to the top two field grades, colonel and lieutenant colonel, will probably not be convened until late September or early October.

Marine Corps strength for the next 12 months depends on a variety of factors, including a continuance or discontinuance of the Korean war, and passage or non-passage of the Douglas bill to increase Marine Corps strength to 400,000. At present, the Corps will have a strength of about 200,000 by the end of December.

1st MarDiv Assn. Officers

Maj. Gen. Merritt A. Edson, USMC (Ret), was elected President of the 1st Marine Division Association at its annual reunion in Philadelphia last weekend. Other officers selected were: 1st Vice President—Brig. Gen. Gregon A. Williams, Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force Atlantic, Troops; 2d Vice President—Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Puller, Commanding General, 3d Marine Brigade; 3d Vice President—Lt. Col. Henry Heming, USMCR, Third Marine Corps Reserve District, New York City; 4th Vice President—Lt. Col. Ralph Marson, USMCR, New York City; Master at Arms — T/Sgt Michael Kane, New York City; Chaplain—Comdr. Robert M. Oltan, (ChC), USNR, Richmond, Va.

Navy Selection Boards

Requests from Regular Navy line officers, not above the grade of lieutenant commander, for transfer to the Supply Corps, will be considered by a selection board scheduled to convene next October.

According to instructions issued this week, requests should be submitted via commanding officers to reach the Bureau of Naval Personnel (B111H) prior to 20 Sept.

In the meantime, a board to select commanders for promotion to captain will be convened next week on 14 August. The promotion zone for this board extends from Comdr. Thomas McCormick Davis (Signal Number 2368, page 25 Navy Register) to Comdr. William Jackson Catlett, jr., (Signal Number 2644, page 27 Navy Register). Two hundred seventy-seven officers are in the zone.

Adm. Fechteler Confirmed

The Senate this week confirmed the nomination of Admiral William M. Fechteler as Chief of Naval Operations. He will be relieved next week as Commander-in-Chief, Atlantic Fleet, by Admiral Lynde D. McCormick, acting CNO.

The change of command ceremony in which Admiral McCormick will become CnC, Atlantic, will take place aboard the carrier USS Franklin D. Roosevelt at Norfolk, Va., on 15 Aug. Admiral Fechteler will report to Washington late next week to be sworn into his new office.

Keep up with your friends by reading the Army Navy Air Force Journal each week.

Assign Marine Generals

Two Marine general officers whose promotion to the rank of major general is pending in the Senate will be shifted to new duty assignments next week.

Brig. Gen. Thomas J. Cushman, recently returned from Korea where he commanded the First Marine Air Wing, will take command of the Second Marine Air Wing, and Air, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, with headquarters at Cherry Point, N. C.

Brig. Gen. Vernon E. Megee, formerly Deputy Director for Intelligence, Joint Staff, Joint Chiefs of Staff, will become Commanding General, Marine Air Station and Marine Corps Bases, at Cherry Point.

Seeks Bigger Air Force

Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee announced this week that he is convinced the nation must move rapidly to expand the Air Force to 138 combat wings, plus 25 troop carrier wings intended primarily for joint Army-Air Force operations, and to expand Naval aviation by adding as promptly as possible 2 additional enlarged aircraft carriers as sister ships to the 59,900 ton carrier recently authorized by the Congress.

On 8 Aug. Mr. Vinson introduced bills to put these plans into effect. The Speaker immediately referred the measures to his committee.

Mr. Vinson stated that two of the big carriers should be assigned to the Atlantic and one to the Pacific, and that they should be completed on a high priority basis. Mr. Vinson said:

"This country is today vulnerable to air attack. The most effective defense against such an attack is adequate air power to meet it, and, above all, to strike back at its sources. It is impossible in modern warfare to postpone or avoid decisive action in the air. No matter how much strength we may be able to assemble on the ground or the sea, we cannot hope to defeat Soviet power unless we have superior strength in the air. Air warfare, once begun, moves very rapidly toward a decision. If the air battle is lost, the war is certain to be lost. In order to win the air battle, we must have in being an Air Force superior to any that could be thrown against us. An Air Force of the size that I propose is essential for the defense of our allies and for our own security.

"This program is not a war program. It will serve as a demonstration of our determination to defend ourselves and our allies against the threat of war. This program will be costly. It will require some sacrifices. But anything less would compromise the security of our nation and the safety of our people. I am confident that the great majority of Americans will give the Air Force and naval air expansion their full support."

New Accent in AF Careers

The importance of brainpower to airpower, and the companion importance of advanced education to the individual officer career, are strikingly underlined in a recent study of general officer promotion actions at Air Force Headquarters.

Brig. Gen. Leighton I. Davis, Commandant of the USAF Institute of Technology, points out that of the last two lists of Air Force officers recommended for advancement to, and within, the general officer grades, "31 per cent of those nominated had received advanced engineering or management education at some period during their commissioned careers."

General Davis said that junior Air Force officers looking for signs that point up career areas where opportunity abounds "would do well to give some attention to the stress placed on the technical side of military aviation."

His study reveals that 19 of the 63 officers recently nominated are currently assigned to positions of high responsibility in the research and development and material fields that support modern aviation and assure its growing future.

Of the 37 officers whose promotions are awaiting Senate confirmation, 11 have either attended the USAF Institute of Technology's predecessor, the old Air Corps Engineering School at Wright-Patterson, or have had courses in civilian colleges through a service civilian institutions program such as that now conducted by USAFIT at some 55 colleges and universities throughout the country.

The list of 26 general officers confirmed for promotion last April, included eight who had had graduate level education during their careers.

"Expanding technical activity throughout the Air Force, the opening of new engineering and research and development centers, the recent establishment of an entire new major Command—the Air Research and Development Command—all point to new accents on the technical side of air power," General Davis said, "and indicate the probability that future officer promotion lists will advance professionally educated people in even greater percentages."

Randolph Command Changes

Top command changes took place at Randolph Air Force Base, San Antonio, Tex., this week, when Brig. Gen. Carl B. McDaniel departed for new duty as Inspector General, Scott Air Force Base, Ill. He was succeeded as Commander of the base by Col. John H. Davies, former Chief of Staff of the Air Training Command.

Replacing Colonel Davies in the ATRC is Col. Augustus H. Minton.

The new base commander, a veteran of 27 years' service, was the organizer of the 313th Bomb Group, the B-29 unit which dropped the atom bomb on Japan. Colonel Davies, who is 47, first entered pilot training in 1929.

AF Selection Board

A selection board of senior Air Force officers will meet on or about 10 Sept. to recommend officers for promotion to the permanent grade of lieutenant colonel.

Approximately 488 officers will be eligible for consideration. They include 375 USAF officers, 20 medical, six dental, four veterinary, 12 medical service, and 71 WAFs. The fully qualified method of selection will be utilized, the Air Force said, except in the consideration of WAF officers, where the best qualified method will be employed.

Names of all permanent grade WAF majors with dates of rank in permanent grade prior to 2 July 1948 will be submitted to the board for consideration.

Consideration in the case of other officers is expected to extend down the promotion list through the following permanent grade majors:

USAF—Freedman, Lloyd A, 5409A.
Medical—Sabin, George M, jr., 19567A.
Dental—Henahan, James P, 18887A.
Veterinary—Hummer, Robert L, 18986A.
Med. Serv.—Hill, William A, 19421A.

Any officer scheduled to be considered under the above conditions may submit a written communication under the provisions of Section 507(c), Officer Personnel Act, if he so desires, the announcement said. Letters should be forwarded prior to 10 Sept. to the Director of Military Personnel, Headquarters USAF, Washington 25, D. C., attention Promotions and Separations Division.

Public Health Grads

Eight veterinary officers received the degree Master of Public Health this June. Attending the University of Michigan were Lt. Col. William B. Snodgrass, Maj. Lester J. Gorman and Maj. Charles H. Snider. Doing graduate work at Harvard University were Lt. Col. Joseph H. Berger and Maj. Robert L. Hummer. At the University of California were Maj. Ralph D. Walters and Capt. U. S. Grant Kuhn, III. Maj. Jack H. Hempy did his work at Johns Hopkins University.

They have been reassigned as follows: Colonel Berger to U. S. Air Forces in Europe; Colonel Snodgrass to headquarters, Strategic Air Command; Major Hempy to Veterinary Division, Air Force Surgeon General; Major Walters to Carswell Air Force Base; Major Hummer to the Gunter Branch, School of Aviation Medicine; Major Gorman to Barksdale AFB; Major Snider to March AFB, and Captain Kuhn to Gunter Branch, School of Aviation Medicine.

SG Office Moves

The Office of the Surgeon General of the Air Force has moved from the Pentagon to Temporary Building No. 8, 3800 Newark Street, Northwest. The building is located in the northwest section of Washington, just off Wisconsin avenue at the corner of 39th and Newark streets. It lies adjacent to McLean Gardens, site of a large apartment project.

New telephone code number is 192 (ORdway 9600). Office hours have been changed to 8:30 a.m.-5:00 p.m. Mail and telegraphic address remains the same as before: Headquarters, USAF, Washington 25, D. C.

Head AF Nurses, WMSC

Promotions for Lt. Col. Verena M. Zeller, acting Chief of the Air Force Nurse Corps and Lt. Col. Miriam E. Perry, Acting Chief of the Air Force Women's Medical Specialist Corps have been announced by Headquarters, USAF.

Both have been named Chiefs of their respective Corps and have advanced to the rank of Colonel. These promotions mark the first time this rank has been given to any women in the Air Force Medical Service and equals the status of these positions in the other services. Major General Harry G. Armstrong, Surgeon General of the Air Force officiated at the promotion ceremony in his office at the Pentagon.

Asks Change in TacAir

Representative W. Sterling Cole (R., N.Y.) has called for a "full-scale investigation . . . of close air support for Army troops," following reports that the Navy and Marine Corps had withdrawn from the joint "Exercise Southern Pine" because of differences about the role of tactical air support.

"There can be no doubt," Mr. Cole said, "that there is very definite interservice antagonism and basic disagreement on this important problem." He added that "the services have evidenced a clear inability to resolve the matter by themselves" and suggested that "congressional intervention is now necessary."

Representative Cole said the "close air-support question can never be successfully resolved until the ground commander is given full command over his airborne artillery in the same manner as he commands the use of his ground artillery," and suggested that close air support aviation be returned to the Army.

The only other alternative would be to assign close air support for the Army to the Marine Corps, he said.

The move, however, was given little encouragement by Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services. He told newsmen that the Air Force is "in the process of developing its tactical aviation and should be given a full opportunity to do so."

New Units to TAC's 9th AF

Two Tactical Wings and one Aircraft Control and Warning Group, formerly under operational control of Tactical Air Command, have been assigned to TAC's Ninth Air Force, according to an announcement by Lt. Gen. John K. Cannon, TAC commander, at his Headquarters at Langley AFB, Va.

The 140th Fighter Bomber Wing, with Headquarters at Buckley Field, Denver, Colo.; the 118th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing, with Headquarters at Memphis Municipal Airport, Memphis, Tenn., and the 154th Aircraft Control and Warning Group, based at Sewart AFB, Nashville, Tenn., are the three units involved in the transfer.

The 140th Fighter Bomber Wing will be based at Clovis AFB, N. M., after the field is rehabilitated for occupancy later this year. Composed of former Air National Guard units, the 140th now has its squadrons stationed at Salt Lake City Airport, Utah; Cheyenne AFB, Wyo., and Buckley Field.

The 118th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing presently has its former Air National Guard squadrons based at Birmingham Municipal Airport, Ala., Will Rogers Field, Okla., and Memphis, Tenn.

The 154th Aircraft Control and Warning Group is entirely based at Sewart AFB, Nashville, Tenn., and is composed of former members of the Georgia and North Carolina Air National Guard.

Air Modification Center

The Air Force will recondition and modify World War II B-25 Mitchell bombers as the first operation of its reactivated Birmingham (Ala.) Modification Center, the Air Materiel Command, Dayton, Ohio, announces.

Still in storage since the last war at Pyote, Texas, the old B-25's after modification will become TB-25's and will be used for twin-engine pilot training.

Toward the end of the B-25 reconditioning phase, the Air Force will start to "cycle recondition" the four-engined C-124 Douglas Globemaster cargo plane at Birmingham. The C-124's are those currently in service and it will not be necessary to recondition them completely as with the long-stored B-25's.

Brig. Gen. A. W. Martenstein, commanding general of the Mobile Air Materiel Area, will have complete supervision over the modification center. General Martenstein has designated Col. Eugene Revengo to be in charge of the Civil Maintenance Detachment at the center.

Col. Gilland to Sewanee

Lt. Col. William Flinn Gilland, USAF, has been assigned to the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., as the first PAS&T for that university's new Air Force ROTC unit. The University of the South is one of the sixty-two new Air Force ROTC units installed this summer. The unit is a part of the Fourteenth Air Force.

Assistant PAS&Ts at the University of the South are Maj. Leslie McLaurins, Jr., with a B.S. from that institution; Maj. Terrell M. Upchurch, A.B. in Ed. from Georgia and for three years Assistant PAS&T at the University of Texas; and Capt. Gales P. Perry, A.B. and M.A. from the University of North Carolina.

Non-commissioned officers assigned to this unit include M/Sgt. John H. Mobley, M/Sgt. John P. Sladzinski, and S/Sgt. Robert B. Carroll.

New Under SecNav

Francis P. Whitehair, war-time Naval officer, was sworn in on 7 Aug. as Under Secretary of the Navy. The oath of office was administered by Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark, an old friend of the Secretary.

F-86 Jets to England

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, has announced that the 81st Fighter-Interceptor Wing equipped with F-86 Sabre jet fighters will leave the U.S. soon for duty in the United Kingdom, where a medium bomber wing of the Strategic Air Command is on rotational training duty. Col. Gladwyn E. Pinkston is Commanding Officer of the Wing.

The 81st Fighter-Interceptor Wing will be the third Fighter Wing assigned to Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad's U.S. Air Forces in Europe. The 36th and 86th Fighter-Bomber Wings, equipped with F-84 Thunderjets, are already on duty in Germany. In addition, Strategic Air Command's 12th Fighter Escort Wing, also equipped with F-84's, is stationed in England on rotational training duty.

Included in the movement of the 81st will be the Wing Headquarters and two fighter-interceptor squadrons currently stationed at Larson AFB, Moses Lake, Wash. and the 116th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, a former Spokane Air National Guard unit, now based at Geiger AFB, Spokane. The 116th was ordered into active military service on 1 Feb. 1951.

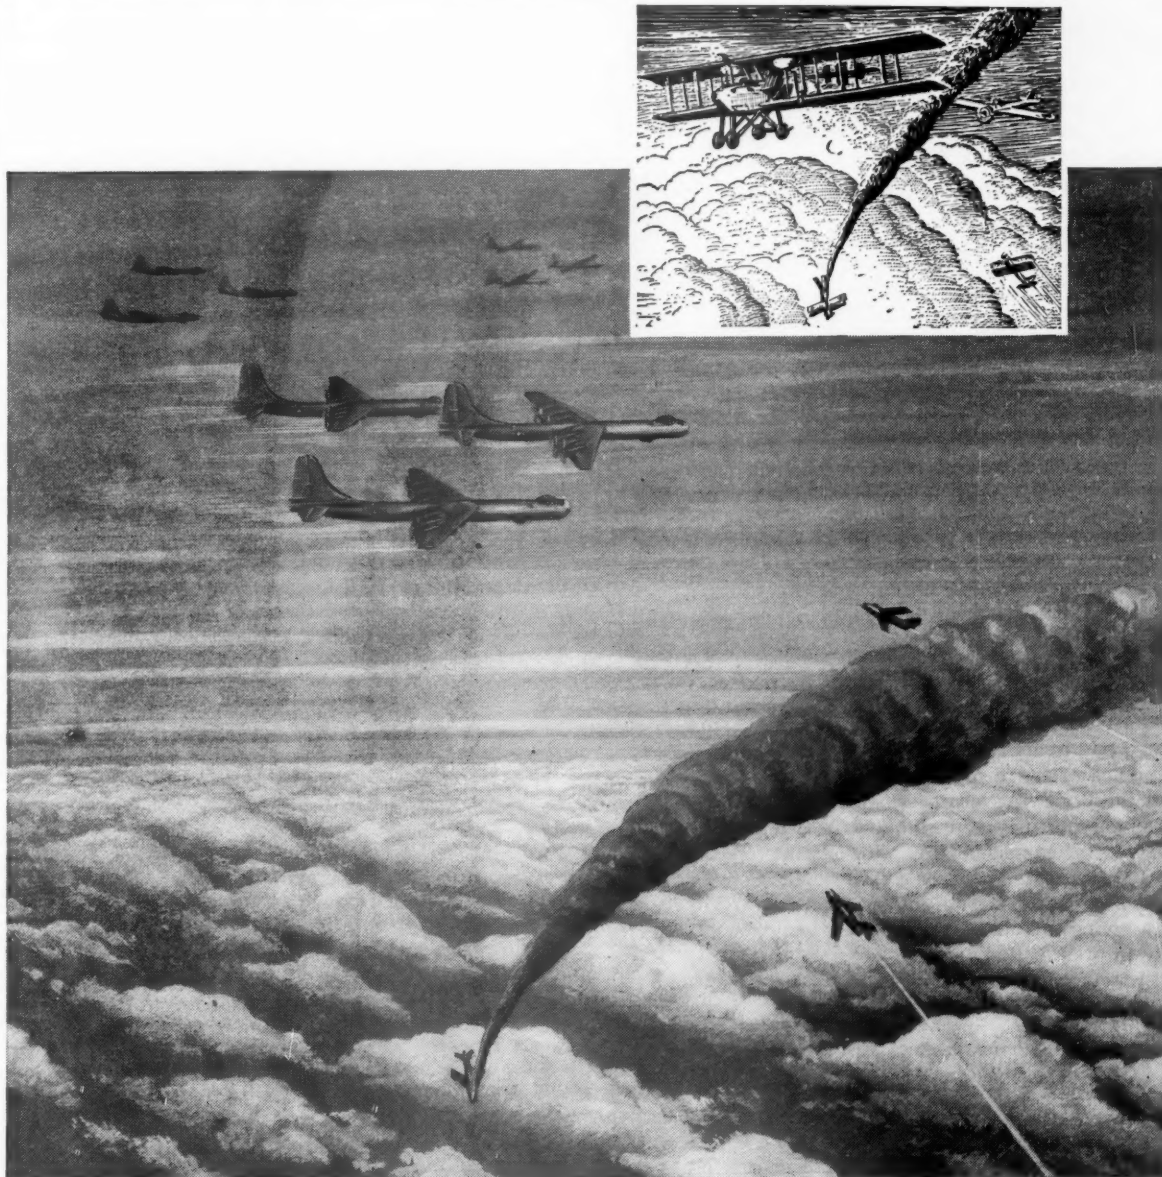

Remaining at Larson AFB will be the 319th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, which is part of the 325th Fighter-Interceptor Wing. This unit will soon be joined by the Headquarters of the 101st Fighter-Interceptor Wing from Grenier, N. H. and the 82d Fighter-Interceptor

91st Recon Wing Moved

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, announced on 8 Aug. that the 91st Strategic Reconnaissance Wing of the Strategic Air Command is moving from Barksdale Air Force Base, Shreveport, La., to Lockbourne AFB, Columbus, Ohio. The 376th Medium Bomb Wing, also of SAC, and recently reactivated at Forbes AFB, Topeka, Kans., will replace the 91st at Barksdale AFB.

Today's speeds demand electronic gunnery

Today, with interceptors capable of closing in at blinding speeds, the problem of effective gunnery for bomber protection becomes increasingly acute. Split-second tracking, computation and firing are demanded—and complex, compact, light-weight electronic instruments furnish the answer. Arma—working closely with our Armed Forces since 1918—has supplied the outstanding engineering, imaginative design and precision manufacture that play a leading part in producing these miraculous instruments.

"I think that everyone familiar with West Point would instantly agree that the one thing that has set us definitely aside from every other school in the world is the fact that for a great number of years it has not only had an Honor System but that the System has actually worked."—GENERAL ROBERT L. EICHELBERGER.

USMA's Honor Code. It should be self-evident that no one regrets more than the Secretary of the Army, the Chief of Staff, and the authorities at the U. S. Military Academy the necessity of releasing the 90 cadets involved in violations of the Academy's Code of Conduct. A public scandal involving the Corps of Cadets is the last thing they would want to bring about. Yet from the charges being made of coercion, intimidation and unfairness, some might be led to the entirely illogical conclusion that the authorities wanted to stir it up.

The fact is that it was only after most thorough and searching inquiries and the application of all safeguards against injustice—and certainly with the greatest reluctance—that the decision was made. Reports were submitted by the Honor Committee composed of members of the Corps of Cadets, investigations were made by a Board of Military Academy officers, further studies were undertaken by the Superintendent before he approved the report, and the Secretary of the Army and the Chief of Staff went to the unusual length of appointing a special Board to review the Academy's findings. With the special Board, there can be no question. It was composed of Judge Learned Hand, a liberal jurist of outstanding note; Lt. Gen. Troy H. Middleton, USA-Ret., a graduate of a civilian college who earned his Army commission after two years of enlisted service, and who since his retirement has won national recognition as president of Louisiana State University, and Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, USA-Ret., USMA '04, former Commandant of Cadets at the U. S. Military Academy, and one-time President of the West Point Association of Graduates. This Board had at its call the facilities and advice of the office of the Inspector General of the Army and the Judge Advocate General of the Army. Upon the conclusion of its inquiry the Board unanimously recommended that the action proposed by the Superintendent be approved. Even now screening boards are still in session at the Academy giving individual cadets a further opportunity to present their cases.

Unfortunately, there are some general misunderstandings concerning the incident. The cadets are not being dismissed for giving or receiving unauthorized assistance at examinations, but for violating the Honor System. There are many instances where cadets, just as in other colleges, may take their chances on being caught for violating regulations and, if caught, be given demerits or lighter forms of punishment. But such cases do not involve the Honor Code, which is an integral part of the Academy system of character building and the inculcation of integrity that is to form the basis of military careers.

No one contends the men involved are criminals. But to make exceptions is to begin the breakdown of a code that has governed the Military Academy virtually since 1816 when the Superintendent dismissed a cadet for lying in connection with a tavern brawl. A number of others, including foreign cadets, have been dismissed over the years, many of whom have doubtless made their mark in other pursuits. But the Honor System with resignation or dismissal for its infringement has been kept inviolate.

The furor that has followed the announcement, while not always soundly directed, reflects the pride of the people in the Academy and the Corps of Cadets. That pride should be the greater with

Efficiency Records

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I am concerned that a false base is used to deny retention on duty, recall to duty, promotion—in short—how the efficiency of officers is judged.

I have been authorized to check the records of three officers who failed of promotion, although in the zone of consideration. I have had personal information from the rating officers in two cases, which indicated them (the rated) as highly desirable officers. The general remarks on the efficiency reports supported those statements. In the third case, this was also true, and further evidence in the file indicated the officer had been recommended for promotion or requested for assignment to a vacancy which would provide a promotion. Circumstances prevented promotion, because higher ranking officers were transferred in.

Throughout his 66-1, in this last case, were a series of Superior and Excellent ratings—until the electro-matic form came along with its gobbledygook questions of "least" and "most" applicable. Then the scores dropped from 116 to 88 to 55 and 58. Horrible scores based on psychological questions, which are still considered in evaluating officers for assignment and promotion—but, based on the misunderstood, or little understood psychological questions, which resulted in a score vastly different from the rater's intentions, as shown by his own words in black and white and verbally. Yet, the only score is on the gobbledygook.

The Department of the Army changed the form to be readable and usable by just plain officers—not personnel scientists—and, I presume, the Department also felt the psychological questions resulted in a score which had no validity. Yet this same individual score is the only thing that cuts the chances of these men, and the valid and true views of their raters have no score and no consideration.

Can't something be done to get a valid basis of scoring efficiency past and present—the rater's opinion as modified Career Compensation Act two years ago, it has withdrawn the military tax exemptions, curtailed the scope of service exchanges and increased their sales prices, and decreased the mileage payments to officers. Now, by approving the commissary amendment, cooked up by the Bureau of the Budget over the opposition of the Department of Defense, the Appropriations Committee proposes to increase the cost of foods and other supplies by an estimated 13 to 18 per cent. On the other hand, while hastening to enact pay increases for civilian government employees, virtually no attention has been paid by the legislators to the few measures which have been introduced to enable Service personnel to meet the risen cost of living. Even the combat pay bill, to which so much lip service has been given, appears to be dying in the committees. Approval of the commissary amendment would be an unnecessary blow to service morale and family budgets of those in the Armed Forces.

Raise Pay Now!

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It is now time for the pussy-footing to end and it had best be ended suddenly. We need no price-index or other extrinsic evidence to indicate to the individual officer that his income is not sufficient to make ends meet. If indices are desired, check how many wives of captains, majors and lieutenant colonels are working to balance the family budget. And these additional incomes aren't used to supply luxuries but to supplement the family budget for necessities. It surely should take no statistics to know that this is not the time to cut travel allowances when travel costs become a more important individual concern.

We cannot get an increase in pay whether for cost of living or whatever, unless there is some aggressive action out of the Pentagon. It will take someone there with some courage to go before Congress and present the facts without attempting to beg.

This is not the Army of 1910 or of 1925 or of 1937. Company grade officers cannot go into debt for ten years and pay it off when they become field grade officers. Those days are gone forever and we do not now have that kind of an army.

Certainly with the reams of information available, it should not be difficult to submit for consideration, at the very least, recommendations for immediate and long term relief including some sort of a pay-as-you-go pension plan which will leave something for dependents so that the average officer will not have to break himself carrying insurance.

Now is the time for aggressive, forthright action by those in Washington on behalf of the officer personnel of the Armed Forces.

Captain, RA.

GENERAL Matthew B. Ridgway, USA, Commander-in-Chief of United Nations Forces in Korea, this week sharply rebuked the high command of the Chinese and North Korean Communists, and wrung from them a reluctant apology for a flagrant violation of conditions under which armistice negotiations were being conducted at Kaesong. As a result of a previous controversy the Reds had accepted the stipulation that a demilitarized zone be established around Kaesong, which would be entirely free from troops of both sides. However, on last Saturday a Red Chinese company, fully armed, traversed Kaesong at a point not far from the scene of the conference.

When the incident was reported to General Ridgway at his headquarters in Japan he immediately broke off negotiations, advising the Reds that he would not send his delegates back to Kaesong until the appearance of the armed Red unit had been satisfactorily explained, and until he had received assurances that there would be no repetition of the occurrence. In their reply the Communists expressed regret, said the presence of the troops was "accidental," and promised that there would be no recurrence of the incident. The Red communication referred to the matter as "minor" and "trivial."

► THE COMMUNIST EXPLANATION was not wholly satisfactory to General Ridgway who transmitted another curt message to the Reds, declaring that the incident was not "minor" and "trivial," but fundamental, and he expressed doubt that it was "accidental." He said that any further violation of the agreement as to the presence of armed troops at Kaesong would be regarded as a deliberate intent of the Reds to terminate the negotiations. Before consenting to a renewal of the truce talks General Ridgway insisted on further assurances that the Communists would maintain the neutral character of Kaesong. The Reds late this week renewed these guarantees in a somewhat petulant note to the Allied Commander-in-Chief.

The State Department this week promptly rejected a new Russian proposal for a five-power peace conference for general limitation of armaments and prohibition of atomic weapons, with provision for international inspection. The countries which were to participate in the proposed conference were the United States, Russia, Great Britain, France and Red China. This proposal is practically the same as previously submitted by Russia in varying forms for the past two years, both to the United Nations and to the western powers.

In a sharply worded statement of rejection the State Department said "the Kremlin has violated obligations to such an extent that the world has lost confidence in the Soviet's respect for treaties." The Department's spokesman said there is no sense in the Soviet government's assuming new treaty obligations "until they have restored the confidence of the world by honoring existing obligations." The position of the United States is the same as in the past, that these are matters pending before the United Nations, where they should be decided.

Among the reasons why the Russian proposal is unacceptable to the United States are that it is our firm policy not to negotiate with Russia on matters involving other countries, unless those nations participate, that the United Nations is the proper forum for basic peace negotiations, and that the United States does not recognize Red China, which Russia would include in the conference. It is pointed out that Russia and her satellites have continually opposed armament restrictions and control of atomic weapons, under realistic regulations for inspection which had the overwhelming support of non-Communist countries. Foreign office spokesmen in London and Paris were quick to concur in the views of the State Department.

► THE NEW SOVIET PEACE PROPOSAL was obviously made for propaganda purposes, and not with any expectation that it would be acceptable to the United States, Great Britain and France. It was contained in a letter to the President from Nikolai Shvernik, nominal head of the Soviet government, transmitting a long and vituperative resolution adopted by the Soviet Presidium. It reiterated the claim of the peaceful aims of the Soviet Union, and pointedly stated that the Soviet army was not fighting anywhere. In addition to presenting the five-power conference proposal the communication urged the elimination of American trade "discrimination" against Russia, especially recent moves to stop shipments of strategic materials to Russia from the west, and to end tariff concessions on exports to America from Russia and her allies.

The letter from Mr. Shvernik purported to be a reply to one from President Truman a month ago, transmitting a Congressional resolution expressing American friendship for the Russian people. Mr. Truman had asked Mr. Shvernik to acquaint the Russian people with the "peace aims of the American people and government." For a month the Truman communication was ignored, but this week it was made public in Russia, together with the Shvernik reply.

In Iran the negotiations between the Iranian government and the British over the nationalization of British-owned oil properties, re-opened under the persuasive influence of Mr. W. Averill Harriman, special envoy of President Truman, began this week in a more favorable atmosphere than has existed for months. With the Iranian oil wells and refinery shut down, the flow of oil to British tankers, and the flow of British funds to the depleted Iranian treasury have completely stopped. An early and satisfactory settlement of the heated controversy, growing out of the arbitrary seizure, without compensation, of the rich British properties by the Iranian government, is essential to the economy of both countries, and to the welfare of the western world.

The well-advertised Communist youth assembly in the Soviet sector of Berlin this week failed to measure up to advance billing. It was boasted that there would be two million participants, but actual attendance fell far below that number. There were well-staged demonstrations and parades of blue-shirted boys and girls, disagreeably reminiscent of the Hitler Youth of a decade ago. There were all the usual Communist trappings, and violent anti-American speeches and banners. However, there apparently was a great shortage of food and satisfactory lodgings, and many thousand Communist youths found their way around Red barriers to slip into West Berlin, under Allied control, where they marvelled hungrily at the well-stocked stores and other evidence of comparative prosperity, unknown to the Soviet zone. They were reluctant to return to East Germany, and many a blue-shirted youngster sought asylum in West Germany.

In a statement of the Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees of the Senate, General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said this week that Europe probably would be able to take over most of the job of equipping its own forces by 1954 or 1955. He pointed out that the bulk of what the United States is now supplying to Western European countries consists of capital equipment, which subsequently can be maintained and replaced largely from local resources. General Bradley referred to the current peace offensive of Russia as "a natural move on her part to interrupt our defense effort." He said that there has been no great improvement in the world situation, and nothing to indicate that Russia has changed her intentions. He said that even if the Korean fighting should be ended it would mean only that there would be other challenges to meet.

► Changes in MATS—Eight changes in key positions of the Military Air Transport Service were announced this week by Rear Adm. Hugh H. Goodwin, Vice Commander, at MATS Headquarters, Andrews AFB, Md.

Maj. Gen. James W. Spry, commander of MATS Atlantic Division, Westover AFB, Mass., will depart within a few days for an important four to six months temporary duty assignment in Europe.

Col. Wentworth Goss, MATS chief of staff, will assume command of the Atlantic Division during General Spry's absence. Col. Downs E. Ingram, deputy director of plans, will become acting chief of staff, MATS.

Col. John W. Warren, deputy commander of MATS Atlantic Division, has been transferred to Iceland where he will assume the same position in the Iceland Defense Force. His replacement will be Col. Joseph G. Hopkins, now deputy chief of staff for transport operations, MATS Pacific Division, Hickam AFB, T. H.

Col. Richard F. Bromiley, commanding officer, 1705th Air Transport Wing, McChord AFB, Wash., will become commanding officer, Kindley AFB, Bermuda, about 1 Sept.; Col. Marshall A. Elkins, director of operations, MATS Continental Division, Kelly AFB, Texas, will replace Colonel Bromiley temporarily.

Col. Jack G. Merrell, current commander of Kindley AFB, will be assigned to Westover AFB about 15 Sept.

► Named Deputy AG—Brig. Gen. John A. Klein was named this week to the newly established post of Deputy The Adjutant General. Chief of the Administrative Services Division of The Adjutant General's Office since 1950, General Klein is the first officer to hold the new position, which was authorized by the Army Organization Act of 1950 and established last month by Army Secretary Frank Pace, jr.

The new position is similar to those already existing in the Offices of the Provost Marshal General and the Chief of Chaplains, which, together with the Office of The Adjutant General, comprise the Administrative Staffs and Services of the Army.

In his new position, General Klein will assist Maj. Gen. William E. Bergin, The Adjutant General.

► Army Officer Replaces Marine on Joint Staff—Brig. Gen. Vernon E. Megee, USMC, who has served as Deputy Director for Intelligence, Joint Staff, since January 1950, has been given command of the Marine Air Station and bases at Cherry Point, N. C., by virtue of his new two-star rank, which is pending in the Senate.

Brig. Gen. Richard C. Partridge, USA, who has replaced General Megee, comes to his new job from the 7th Army in Germany where he had served as Deputy Chief of Staff for the past twenty months. Prior to that time, General Partridge was Deputy Director of the Intelligence Division, European Command, Heidelberg, Germany.

► History of Naval War College—A history of the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., is being prepared by Capt. C. B. Judge, USNR, who would like to receive any "personal letters, memoirs and published articles" or other material "which will throw light on the history" of the college. Material can be mailed to Captain Judge in care of the War College, and he has indicated that it "will be carefully handled and returned as soon as possible." Founded by Admiral Luce in 1884, the Naval War College is the oldest service college in the United States.

► Denies Quotation—Brig. Gen. David J. Crawford, USA, who was recently relieved of command of the Detroit Ordnance Tank-Automotive Center and transferred to duty in Germany, declared this week that he "did not make the statement attributed to me by certain press releases essentially as follows, 'I did nothing that anyone else would not have done, only I got caught at it.'"

► Navy Develops Body Armor—A long list of accomplishments in the field of Naval Medical Research, including a new body armor for troops, was outlined in recent House hearings. The Navy said that during the past year it had developed a body armor which "will protect against small-arms fire, including the machine gun and the sub-machine gun, and will stop fragments from hand grenades and mortar fire." The device, now being used by Marine troops in Korea, was developed at the Naval Medical Field Research Laboratory, Camp Lejeune, N. C.

Improvements in the escape lung, which allow imprisoned sailors to escape from sunken submarines, were also revealed. The Navy said the new accomplishments in this field will enable men "to ascend with greater safety and protection from greater depths from the ocean floor."

Another new development, the Navy said, is production of a complete surgical trailer and field X-ray equipment for use in combatant zones. This equipment is being used "at great advantage in Korea," the Navy added, "and has resulted in the saving of a great number of lives."

Other accomplishments listed by the Navy include a device to measure the intensity of radiation, drugs to eliminate sea-sickness, demonstrations discounting the worth of antihistamines for the common cold, extensive field studies in purification of water, and reevaluation of anti-G suits which will enable pilots to obtain greater performance from aircraft with less ill effects.

► Air University—Lt. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, USAF, who was until recently Deputy Chief of Staff, Operations, Headquarters, USAF, arrived at Maxwell AFB, Ala., 1 Aug. to assume command of the Air University. General Edwards succeeds General George C. Kenney, USAF, as Commanding General of the Air University. General Kenney has commanded the Air University since 29 Oct. 1948, and is scheduled to retire 31 Aug.

Greeting General Edwards on arrival at Maxwell were Maj. Gen. John DeF. Barker, deputy commanding general, Air University; Maj. Gen. John A. Samford, commandant, Air War College; Brig. Gen. Ruben C. Hood, jr., commandant, Air Command and Staff School; Brig. Gen. Matthew K. Deichmann, Director of Education, Air University; Rear Adm. Frank T. Ward, Chief, Naval Advisory Group; Col. R. Loyal Easton, Director of Administration, Air University; and Col. Leslie G. Mulzer, Maxwell commandant.

Ships of the Fleet—Unification of the services took an unusual turn recently when the crew of the U. S. Naval Transport General J. H. McRae collected $200 for the 27th Infantry Wolfhounds Orphanage in Osaka, Japan. With the money, the sailors sent a message expressing their admiration for the generosity of the 27th, which has been taking collections for the orphanage for the past year and a half.

The USS Bolster, a rescue and salvage ship under the command of Lt. H. H. Harding, has arrived at Pearl Harbor from an eleven-month tour of duty in the Western Pacific. While in Korean waters, the Bolster rendered assistance to the mined destroyers Brush and Mansfield in the vicinity of Tanchon, and in December played an important role in the withdrawal of UN ground forces from the Hungnam perimeter.

The fleet minesweeper Murrelet has reported to the Commander, Mine Force, Pacific, after arriving from the West Coast. Commissioned too late to serve in World War II, the ship engaged in sweeping operations in Far Eastern waters after the war. Skippered by Lt. John W. O'Neill, the Murrelet had been undergoing extensive minesweeping training at Long Beach, prior to her departure.

The USS Mulberry, a net tender, under the command of Lt. I. T. Benson, has arrived in Pearl Harbor after eleven months in the Western Pacific.

The destroyers Walke and Stickell also arrived in Pearl Harbor this week from the Korean theater of operations. While in the Western Pacific, they served as anti-submarine screen for the Navy's fast carrier task force operating off the east coast of Korea. Comdr. Marshall F. Thompson commands the Walke and Comdr. Jesse B. Gay, jr., commands the Stickell.

The fleet minesweeper Incredible was on its way to the West Coast this week after three and a half years of service in the Far East. Commanded by Lt. Edward P. Flynn, the ship was the only survivor of the three-ship minesweeping formation at Wonsan when the Pirate and Pledge hit mines and sank with heavy casualties.

Recommissioning of the seaplane tender Currituck took place last week at the Philadelphia Naval Base with Capt. John H. McElroy in command. The ship is a floating super-service station for the Navy's big patrol bombers.

Raising of the sunken Navy hospital ship Benevolence is "impracticable" according to Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Chief of Army Engineers. Sunk in San Francisco Bay on 25 Aug. last year in a collision with the SS Mary Luckenbach, the ship lies near the entrance to the Golden Gate. To eliminate it as a menace to navigation, it will be reduced, in place, with explosives.

The USS Bolster has returned to Pearl Harbor after 11 months' duty in the mined waters of the Korean forward area. The ship, commanded by Lt. H. H. Harding, was commended on arrival by Admiral Arthur W. Radford who said, "Your contribution to the naval effort is out of all proportion to your size."

North Carolina AG Retires—After 54 years' service as a National Guardsman, Maj. Gen. J. Van B. Metts retired on 31 July as The Adjutant General of North Carolina.

Governor W. Kerr Scott commended the retiring general for his "thirty-one years of loyal and valuable service" to the state. "Under your leadership," Governor Scott said, "the National Guard of North Carolina has made a most commendable record, and you have made a valuable contribution to the security of your State and Nation."

During World War I, General Metts commanded a regiment in France, and won the Distinguished Service Medal for action during the assault on the Hindenburg Line. He had served as North Carolina's Adjutant General since 1920, under appointment from nine governors.

Tankers, Troopers or Armormen?—A perplexing problem has cropped up in the pages of "Armor," which points out in a two-page editorial that there is no common designator for the Armored Force soldier. Sometimes they are called troopers, the magazine says (but troopers have "always been identified with the horse soldier"); sometimes they are labeled tankers (but this is a good name only for the men in tanks and "doesn't lend itself to usage by the armored infantrymen or artilleryman or engineer . . ."); armormen, on the other hand, "isn't so bad" (but its lack of usage and familiarity make it "seem strange").

The magazine, which began life as "The Cavalry Journal," would like suggestions for a trade name for the Armored Force soldier, something that will permanently tag "the specialist in mobility, fire power and shock."

Air Weather Service Reorganization—The Air Weather Service (MATS) has completed a reorganization of its Zone of Interior units as part of a program to insure a continuous improvement of its capability to provide meteorological support to U. S. Air Force and Army commands, it is announced by Brig. Gen. W. O. Senter, USAF, Chief, Air Weather Service. Effective 1 Aug. three new air weather groups were activated to provide direct meteorological support to three major USAF commands located within the United States. The 2059th Air Weather Wing, located at Tinker AFB, Okla., will continue to provide weather support to other Air Force commands in this country.

Under the new functional concept, which will apply in the Zone of Interior only, individual Air Weather Service units will support each of three major USAF commands regardless of the locale of their operations.

The supporting weather group for SAC is the 2101st Air Weather Group, commanded by Col. James T. Seaver, jr. This air weather group will be located at Offutt AFB, Nebr. The weather group supporting TAC is the 2102d Air Weather Group, commanded by Col. Anthony T. Shotgren, based at Langley AFB, Va. ADC will be supported by the 2103d Air Weather Group, commanded by Col. Arthur A. McCartan. This group will be located at Ent AFB, Colorado Springs, Colo.

RAF in SAC Competition—The Royal Air Force has accepted an invitation to participate in the annual Strategic Air Command Bombing and Navigation Competition to be held at MacDill AFB, Fla., 13-18 Aug. This will be the first participation by the RAF in the annual event.

The RAF crews will use two SAC B-29's, similar to B-29 aircraft which have been delivered to Britain under the Mutual Defense Assistance Program.

Transportation Corps—Lt. Col. Harry C. Dodenhoff has been named by Brig. Gen. Harold R. Duffie as Acting Assistant Commandant of the Army's Transportation School at the Army's Transportation Center, Ft. Eustis, Va. He succeeds Lt. Col. Willard R. Root, who has been selected to attend the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

WAF Staff Director—Maj. Arlene H. Goodridge has departed Air Training Command Headquarters, Scott AFB, Ill., to assume her new duties as WAF Staff Director of Headquarters Command, USAF. Her successor has not yet been named. Her recent assignment at Bolling AFB, Washington, D. C., culminates nine months at Scott AFB as assistant to WAF Staff Director Lt. Col. Willa M. Briggs.

Heads Field Forces Board—Col. Henry E. Kelly, formerly with the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., has recently succeeded Col. Charles F. Craig as president, Army Field Forces Board No. 3 at Ft. Benning, Ga. Colonel Craig, whose confirmation as brigadier general was recently announced, is en route to Camp Kilmer, N. J., his new station.

Postgraduate Academies—Recent Congressional testimony on the fiscal year 1952 budget reveals that a study has been made regarding the possibility of converting West Point and Annapolis into postgraduate schools. Maj. Gen. Frederick Irving, USA, Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy, was asked about such a project. "I believe there has been some study on that," he responded. Queried as to how far the study had gone, General Irving replied that he did not know, adding that he has never seen the study.

Plaque Honors Chaplains—A plaque dedicated to five chaplains killed in Korea was unveiled by General Matthew B. Ridgway, Commander-in-Chief, Far East Command, in ceremonies 29 July at the GHQ Chapel Center, Tokyo. The day marked the 176th Anniversary of the Chaplains of the United States Army. The plaque was presented by the Far East Command chaplains.

The five chaplains who have lost their lives in Korea, all of whom held the rank of captain, were: Herman G. Felhoelter, 19th Infantry Regiment; Byron D. Lee, 25th Infantry Division; Samuel R. Simpson, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Division; Leo P. Craig, Division Artillery, 1st Cavalry Division; and Francis X. Coppens, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Division.

"Temporary Texan"—Col. M. V. Brunson, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, Camp Breckinridge, Ky., has been appointed a Temporary Citizen of Texas by the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce. Among other privileges, the honor permits Colonel Brunson, while in Texas, "to talk with a slow drawl" and be referred to or addressed as "Tex."

Bar Widows From Clubs—A correspondent has brought up the fact that widows of Army officers are not eligible for membership in officers' clubs in the District of Columbia area. She points out that most Army widows cannot afford membership in other type clubs and that, even if they could, most of their friends are military families.

The Army, in response to a query from THE JOURNAL, pointed out that membership in such clubs is "entirely up to the discretion of the commanding officer of the base." A spokesman added that the prerogative of commanding officers in deciding who can and who cannot belong to such clubs is very broad.

Navy Wife Starts Radio Show—In Port Lyautey, French Morocco, service personnel can keep abreast of U. S. current events, know the standings in the major baseball leagues, and even learn the French language and customs, by turning on their radio—all because of radio-minded, hard-working Mrs. Eleanor Canedy.

The wife of Lt. Comdr. Leroy Canedy, USN, of Air Transport Squadron 24, and an experienced radio and television artist, Mrs. Canedy is directing and producing a daily radio program for Americans over the French radio network in the Port Lyautey area from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. daily. The program was organized to promote the interests of Americans residing in the area, and to better relationships and understanding between the American and French people.

Hits Award Jackpot—Sixteen awards to one man at one time is the amazing accomplishment of 1st Lt. Cecil Hurry of the First Armored Division. Maj. Gen. Bruce C. Clarke, commander of the division, presented Lieutenant Hurry with the Distinguished Flying Cross with two Oak Leaf Clusters and the Air Medal with 12 Oak Leaf Clusters at a review of the division's Artillery recently.

An Artillery officer, Lieutenant Hurry won his medals for flying. Until recently, he was an aerial observer with the 159th Field Artillery Battalion in Korea. Between last summer and last spring, the flying Artilleryman completed over 200 combat missions in support of the 25th Infantry Division.

Some things
won't stay hidden

In one respect at least, Delco Radio is like our fine-feathered friend, the ostrich . . . too conspicuous to be overlooked. You see, Delco radios are in use everywhere today . . . in countless thousands of passenger cars, trucks, buses and other vehicles.

Yes, the same assembly lines that turned out vast quantities of radio and electronic equipment in World War II are now producing for peace at an even greater rate . . . nearly 2,000,000 radio sets in 1950 alone!

Our object in telling you this? It's simply to let you know that Delco Radio is better equipped than ever to produce for America's armed forces. Our special talents, rich experience and broad facilities are now, as always, at Uncle Sam's disposal. Delco Radio Division is reporting for duty!

Adams, Sfc Virgil A.

New Plan for Reserves

Hearings on a new Armed Forces Reserve Bill, designed to iron out many of the alleged inequities of the current Reserve structure, were opened recently in the House with Defense Department officials giving full support to the measure.

Introduced by Representative Overton Brooks (D-Ia.) who is also chairman of the subcommittee holding hearings on the proposed legislation, the bill (HR 4860) is drafted to accompany plans for Universal Military Training.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna Rosenberg testified that "The two acts are inseparable" and that "One cannot be effective without the other." She told the committee, "With these two measures, we can achieve the largest measure of security with the lowest cost in men and money."

Mrs. Rosenberg said the Defense Department was confident the new bill would "eliminate many of the practices that have caused so much unhappiness among reservists in the past." She pointed out that Reservists will gain "stability and certainty," that they will know "how much service is required of them and the order of priority governing their call."

To accomplish this purpose, the Act provides that the reserve of each military department be divided into three main sections. The first group, the "Ready Reserve," will consist of volunteers and those available for an immediate call-up when an emergency arises. The second group, the "Standby Reserve" (similar to the present "volunteer" and "inactive" Reservists) will consist of individuals available for military service only upon declaration of a war, or when Congress declares a national emergency. The third group, the "Retired Reserve," will include those who, if still able to serve, may only be called to active duty involuntarily in time of war or national emergency.

The Reserve program under the new bill would permit the Defense Department, Mrs. Rosenberg said, to deploy reserve units in "half the time that is now required." She said the legislation "reflects the best thinking of many groups and individuals" and has incorporated in it the best features of the 1947 Roper report and the 1948 Gray report. "With it," she said, "the nation can expect to reap full benefits from its establishment of Universal Military Training and Service."

Army Assistant Secretary Earl D. Johnson testified that the bill "will not only make possible a greater return in security per dollar expended than past reserve programs have produced, but also will give the nation as much for its money in the future as any new plan that has been suggested." He warned, however, that its effectiveness would be in direct proportion to appropriations from Congress to carry it out. Congress, he said, will have to support "from year to year the necessary building and maintenance of armories, procurement of equipment, and training of the Army reserve forces, through the regular appropriation of needed funds."

The Navy, represented by Assistant Secretary for Air John F. Floberg, also approved the measure. Mr. Floberg said that "authority for Reservists voluntarily to contract with the service for periods of active duty of definite duration should not only attract a high caliber of individual but also reduce the number of individuals who have in the past been recalled involuntarily." Passage of the bill would, however, make it necessary for the Navy to maintain a larger active duty force, he said, with additional training centers and expanded facilities.

Air Force Assistant Secretary Eugene M. Zuckert reported to the committee that his service also "favors the enactment of HR-4860." He said the bill "gives recognition to the vital role of the Reservist that must be played in relation to the partial and full mobilization requirements of the Air Force" and that it is "considered essential" to meet the impact of responsibilities imposed by UMT.

Others who testified during the hearings this week were Edwin H. Burgess, former chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board; and Brig. Gen. Melvin J. Maas of the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association. Mr. Burgess also read a statement by Maj. Gen. Julius Ochs Adler, AUS.

Mr. Burgess said that the concept of Reserve forces in the past had been based upon the organizing, training and equipping of a reserve in peace time for use in the event of all-out war, but that during the present emergency it became apparent that reserves must also be prepared for a role of quick expansion during a partial mobilization. He said "It was feared that many officers and enlisted men would quit the reserves unless many of the basic policies were changed" and that it appeared likely "many would not voluntarily place themselves in the position to suffer a recurrent interruption of their private lives every time an international police action arose or was threatened." The new bill, he said, "provides definiteness as to liability of reservists to order to active military service."

General Adler said that the bill, together with UMT, "will place this nation in a defense posture supported by the trained manpower sufficient to give pause to any aggressor."

The MCROA, General Maas reported, supports the proposed legislation "in general" and urges "as strong as we can its early enactment."

SecNav Wants Big Navy

Navy Secretary Dan A. Kimball said in a West Coast speech this week that the U.S. Navy requires "more men, more ships, and more submarines" to make it what he termed an "adequate Navy."

Referring to the present Navy expansion program as a "modest build-up and modernization," Secretary Kimball outlined the reasons "why I think we need a large Navy." He said, "A Navy adequate to our needs today and the needs which we will continue to have tomorrow and for the foreseeable future is a big one. This adequate Navy will require more men, more ships, and more submarines and more airplanes than we have in our active fleet today."

Mr. Kimball said history has taught us that we must control the seas in order to emerge as victors in any future conflict. "The emergency of air power has not, in my opinion," he said, "altered this requirement." He declared that "air power has added to the weapons of sea power, but it has not supplanted it."

The new Navy Secretary warned that "In this uneasy period of our history, we must build up our armed strength."

Navy Sets New Rocket Mark

The Navy's seventh Viking rocket, fired from the testing grounds at White Sands, N. M., on 7 Aug., set a new record this week as it soared 135 miles into the air.

The new record was 21 miles greater than the one established previously, also at White Sands, by a rebuilt German V-2 rocket. Instruments in the Viking are expected to reveal important data about the temperatures, pressures and density of the atmosphere at the high altitudes through which it passed.

Numerous top Defense officials and officers, including Army Secretary Frank Pace, were on hand to witness the record-making event.

FT. SLOCUM, N. Y. The following is the text of a release from the Armed Forces Information School:

Capt. and Mrs. Richard W. Marshall of

Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, were "Cort-Marshall'd" on 11 July at the Wright-Patterson AFB hospital; the probable sentence—months of night guard duty. Exhibit "A" was a 7 lb. 10 oz. loud speaker, formally labelled Richard Cort Marshall.

The grandfather, Col. Louis W. Marshall, Deputy Commandant for Instruction at the Armed Forces Information School, Ft. Slocum, N. Y., indicated the importance and far reaching effect of the issue by stating, "If contained within the Air Force, as we hope it will be, it is entirely possible that, in time, this matter may develop into a General Cort Marshall."

One thing is for certain, neither the parents nor the grandparents will live this Cort Marshall down. They will undoubtedly be reminded of it constantly throughout the balance of their military careers. Paradoxically, there are hopes that this will be the longest-lived "Cort Marshall" in military history.

Captain Marshall is a pilot assigned to the Equipment Laboratory of the Engineering Division at Wright-Patterson. He served as a B-17 Navigator with the 2d Bomb Group of the 15th Air Force in Italy.

Commissioner of Education, with federal, state, local and base officials.

Col. James R. Gunn, Jr., base commander, pointed out that the base school is a solution to the congestion in nearby Mt. Clemens' public school which base children now attend. Maj. William H. Nell, Selfridge representative on the planning group, said the school will be ready for occupancy in mid-January, possibly sooner.

Rotation Plans

port and other facilities prompted the action. It was predicted that first notices will reach dependents after 1 Oct. that they can travel to Japan.

General Ridgway, under date of 30 July, had written to the editor of the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL as follows:

"In reply to your letter of 9 July 1951, expressing interest in the movement of dependents to Japan, the following information is furnished.

"Compelling military considerations obtaining in July 1950 necessitated the suspension of dependent travel to Japan. Since that time many factors, variable and unpredictable, have intervened to make dependent travel to Japan inadvisable. The changing international situation and the consequent stresses on our shipping and supply services, the rapid deployment of individuals throughout the staging area, and the imminence of transfer to Korea of any individual serving in Japan, have rendered impractical and inadvisable the lifting of suspension of dependent travel to Japan. Obviously, some aspects of this problem are not confined to the Far East Command, but are world-wide in scope and cannot be resolved based on local considerations alone.

"The factors involved in resumption of dependent travel to Japan, as well as rotation of military personnel from Japan, have had my earnest consideration from the moment of assuming command of this Theater. They continue to receive the closest attention of this headquarters and higher authority. It is fully realized that the forced separation of families is highly undesirable and, within my authority, it is my firm intention that this situation shall be alleviated just as soon as conditions justify.

"Sincerely,

"M. B. RIDGWAY,

"General, United States Army."

Rotation Plans Revealed

The details of the new rotation program for the Far East Command were told in the following release, issued in Tokyo on 3 August. The text was made available to THE JOURNAL this week at the Pentagon.

"Theater-wide rotation of Army personnel out of the FEC will get underway 1 Sept. as a result of a new rotation plan which generally will send those with longest current foreign service home first. It was announced today by Brig. Gen. Bryan L. Milburn, Asst. Chief of Staff, G-1, GHQ.

"No definite tour of service has yet been established because of the huge backlog that has built up as a result of suspension of normal foreign service tours and because of the increasing number of individuals eligible for direct rotation for Korea to the U. S. on the basis of 6 months' service in close combat. This backlog must be reduced before the goal of establishing rotation on a fixed-tour-of-duty basis in all FEC Commands can be established.

"The new rotation plan will include all Army personnel serving in the FEC Commands can be established.

"The new rotation plan will include all Army personnel serving in the FEC instead of being restricted to personnel serving in Korea as has previously been the case. It will also replace the present 'Korea-to-the-U. S.' rotation plan under which individuals have been eligible for return home after serving a minimum of 6 months in close combat.

"Enlisted personnel serving in Korea who were eligible, prior to 1 June for rotation to the U. S. under the old plan, will be sent home if possible prior to the implementation of the new rotation policy, according to the announcement. Officers who were eligible for combat rotation as of 1 June will be returned to the U. S. ASAP, but may not necessarily be returned prior to the inauguration of the new rotation plan.

"Under the new plan the combat soldier will continue to receive special consideration for Korean service. He will be credited with constructive service for the total time he spends in Korea, depending on the type of service he performs.

"For each month an individual serves in combat division or separate combat unit in Korea, he will be credited with 4 months of constructive service in computing the time he has served in the FEC. An individual serving in Korea in any other capacity will be credited with 2 months of constructive service for each month actually served.

"In Japan, constructive service will be authorized only for those married individuals whose dependents are not present with them. For each month they have served without their dependents subsequent to 1 July 1950, they will be credited with an additional-half month of constructive service. Individuals serving in Japan who have their dependents with them received no constructive service, and will compute their service on the basis of actual time served.

"Individuals serving in RYCOM, PHILCOM and MARBO will receive 1 and 1-half months' constructive service for each month of actual service. Married individuals serving in these areas without their dependents will be credited with 2 months' constructive service.

"The amount of service, actual or constructive, which will qualify an individual for rotation to the U. S. will be announced each month for each major command by the CINCPAC. Initially, the length of service required for rotation from the various commands may not be the same. This is due to the fact that in some Commands many individuals have already served long beyond normal tours, while in other Commands combat rotation and attrition have somewhat reduced this backlog. Ultimately, however, it is hoped that individuals will be rotated from Japan, Korea and all other FEC Commands after the same amount of constructive service.

"The number actually rotated to the U. S. will depend on the number of replacements available, operational requirements and the authorized strength of the Command. Once that new plan gets underway, it is hoped that the length of service required to qualify for rotation to the U. S. will be progressively reduced. It is emphasized that the maintenance of combat effectiveness and the availability in each case of able qualified replacements are basic and governing criteria, and must take precedence over the right of any individual to be rotated.

"Present indications are that officers will be required to serve longer periods of time than enlisted personnel before qualifying for rotation.

"Individuals may be rotated from Korea to Japan or elsewhere in the FEC after that have accumulated 24 months of constructive service (6 months actual service with a division or separate combat unit or 12 months actual service elsewhere in Korea and may complete currently required foreign service tours in their new assignments. In most instances, such rotation will be on a voluntary basis, with the individual himself applying for intra-theater rotation. In many cases, however, it may be directed—when in the best interests of the military service.

"This intra-theater rotation applies equally to individuals serving in Japan, RYCOM, PHILCOM or MARBO. Individuals may request transfer to Korea or may be reassigned involuntarily on the basis of requirements.

"While all requests for intra-theater rotation cannot be granted, an individual will generally be rotated within the theater if he can be effectively employed in the Command to which he requests transfer. Otherwise, he may serve out his complete foreign service tour where he is assigned—and then be rotated directly to the U. S.

Limit Service Retirements

from ships and facilities, $34,850,000 from Marine Corps troops and facilities, and $22,476,000 from construction of aircraft.

For the Air Force—$19,846,985,000, which is $4,055,924,000 more than last year but $647,015,000 less than the budget estimates. Largest cuts were $501,200,000 from aircraft and related procurement, $60,000,000 from military personnel requirement, and $50,000,000 from major procurement other than aircraft.

Office of the Secretary of Defense—$528,800,000 which is $155,500,000 less than last year and $16,000,000 less than the budget estimates.

The Committee report was written in a critical mood. In the very beginning it calls attention to the fact that the Budget estimates were not sent to Congress until 30 April although the law requires that it be submitted during the first 15 days of the session (this session began in January). "Hereafter," the report stated, "the committee and the Congress will insist that the Budget, summary data and text, and supporting detail be received within the time limit prescribed."

Next the committee found fault with the way the justification data was given to it, terming it "most inadequate," and declaring that "members were forced to develop from witnesses through long and tedious questioning and from material submitted in addition to the justifications, information that should have been readily available in the books of justification."

Much of this, the committee charged, was due to "delays on the part of policy making officials rather than to those directly responsible for the preparation of the justifications."

It was also charged that the hearings revealed inadequacy of manpower controls and great abuse in the use of overtime.

"The committee feels," the report says, "that all the services should scrutinize procurement policies and seek to get a dollar value for each dollar spent. The committee deprecates the practice, information of which has recently been made public, of improper relations between procurement officials and representatives of firms from whom they procure millions of dollars worth of equipment, and so forth."

Again: "Large sums of money are provided for the procurement of many civilian-type items and unless there is proper management of the expenditure of such funds serious effects may be had upon the economy of the Nation. Ill-advised shotgun buying of certain civilian-type items can have and does have a very inflationary tendency upon prices and marketing procedures."

The committee continued its critical attitude in discussing promotions to top grades and the release of personnel who have not reached retirement age. The report states:

"The committee wishes to sound a note of caution with respect to military promotion policies and suggests a study be made to determine a proper policy in keeping with merit and responsibility. There should be no piling up of top grades in excessive numbers. It has been pointed out that tables of organization permit of the numbers approved. If the tables of organizations permit too many high ranking grades or too rapid promotions, it may be necessary to give consideration to the changing of such tables of organizations."

"The committee has been concerned at the numbers of both military and civilian personnel assigned to public information and publicity work and directs that in apportioning personnel reductions effected throughout the bill that sharp reductions be made in such personnel in the Pentagon and throughout the Services."

"The committee again wishes to call to the attention of responsible officials the large requests for funds for travel. A great amount of travel is, of course, necessary to the defense program, but many movements of troops from one section of the country to another could be avoided and funds saved. It is not uncommon to find members of the military forces who, within a short period of time, have had permanent assignments in most every section of the country. Responsible officials should be as interested in providing the best trained and most efficient military personnel as are members of the Congress and at as little expense to the taxpayers of the Nation, but there is room for improvement and the committee calls these matters to the attention of such responsible officials in order that studies may be inaugurated and corrections made.

"The committee throughout the hearings and in this report has attempted to bring to the attention of proper officials abuses that few will deny exist—some to a greater degree than others—in the hope that through proper cooperation corrections can be made.

"The appropriation request for 'Retired Pay' in the amount of $360,000,000 is to provide for pay of military personnel on the retired lists of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force. Information before the committee indicated that the appropriation request for fiscal year 1951 was overestimated. More retired personnel are being called back into service which should reduce the requirements, and in the opinion of the committee more careful scrutiny should be given to requests for retirement of persons who have not reached the legal age limit for retirement. On the basis of these facts and on past experience the committee recommends a reduction of $15,000,000 in this request leaving for appropriation $345,000,000."

USMA Honor Code

view to discharging the cadets involved.

"The Cadet Honor Code is the basis of the traditional high standard of personal integrity and character which has been a hallmark of West Point throughout its existence.

"In this instance the infractions consisted of receiving improper outside assistance in academic work. In accordance with the accepted Code of Honor, a cadet is not permitted to seek or to accept improper assistance in any of the tests presented to him in class.

"The Honor Code was established by and is administered largely by the cadets. They themselves apply the principles to all cadets regardless of their position or of their standing in the Corps. In the group being discharged are cadets who have been prominent in various activities including varsity football.

"In making the announcement General Irving said, 'This action, which has been taken with the approval of the Department of the Army, is the source of the deepest regret to me, as well as to all graduates and cadets of the Military Academy. Admittedly the action being taken is stern and uncompromising, but after weighing all factors most carefully I and the responsible heads of the Army are convinced that there could be no compromise solution that would preserve the vital honor system of West Point, which is the very heart of the Academy.'

"From the day a cadet enters West Point, the ideals which are exemplified in the Honor Code are impressed on him in all of his activities.

"The ethics of honor are above and apart from regulations. A violation of regulations does not necessarily involve the integrity of an individual. But when a cadet does not accept the tenets which are the foundation of the integrity demanded of an officer, he surrenders his right to the trust imposed upon him by the nation. During the one hundred and fifty years in which the motto of the Military Academy has been 'Duty, Honor, Country,' those words have guided the Army in war and in peace. These three words mean one thing—integrity. The code behind that meaning is above any one individual.

"If we are to retain the faith of parents whose sons the officers of the Army must lead in battle, then we must preserve in those leaders the very highest standards not only of courage but of integrity."

"Since the cases involved the Cadet Honor Code, the names of the discharged cadets will not be released so that no undue criticism of the individuals concerned will result."

With the release of the West Point statement, the Department of the Army at the Pentagon made available to the press the following explanation of the procedure utilized in investigating the facts:

"Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr., today confirmed that, upon the recommendation of the Chief of Staff, he had approved the action taken and announced by the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy with respect to certain violations of the code of conduct of the United States Corps of Cadets, involving approximately 90 cadets. Following a thorough investigation of the case by a Board of Military Academy

Officers appointed at West Point, by the Superintendent, this case was reported to the Secretary of the Army through the Chief of Staff. The Superintendent approved the recommendations of the West Point Board that the cadets involved be discharged from the service.

"On the recommendation of the Chief of Staff, the Secretary of the Army appointed a Board to review the findings of the West Point Board and the recommendations of the Superintendent. The Board consisted of the following:

"The Honorable Learned Hand, Judge of the 2d United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

"Lt. Gen. Troy H. Middleton, USA-Ret., President of Louisiana State University.

"Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, USA-Ret., former Commandant of Cadets at the U. S. Military Academy, and ex-President of the West Point Association of Graduates.

"The Secretary of the Army made available to the Board the facilities and advice of the Office of The Inspector General of the Army and of The Judge Advocate General of the Army in order to develop any further evidence the Board desired.

"The Board completed its inquiry, and unanimously recommended to the Secretary of the Army that the proposed action of the Superintendent be approved.

"The Chief of Staff of the Army again reviewed the recommendations of the West Point Board and of the Superintendent in the light of the report of the Board headed by Judge Hand, and recommended approval of their recommendations to the Secretary of the Army, to be carried out by the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy.

Secretary Pace said:

"I deeply regret that it is necessary to take this severe action. The great value of West Point to the Army and to the Nation rests on the unwavering integrity and character of its graduates. I feel that there can be no compromise in the maintenance of the high standards of conduct on which West Point was founded. The honor code is the essence of West Point and must be maintained.

"In weighing this action the Chief of Staff and I were also influenced by the fact that an Army officer has, in battle, the responsibility for the lives of men under his command, just as a doctor has the responsibility for the life or death of his patients. The integrity of such a man must be above reproach. There is no question but that throughout its existence West Point has set the high standards and the tenets for the Officer Corps of the Army, and these must be preserved."

Repercussions were instantaneous. The story took lead positions on front pages of newspapers from coast to coast. The code violations threw a pall over preliminary planning for next year's sesquicentennial ceremonies at West Point. Never before in the 150-year history of the Academy had there been such a mass ouster of Cadets for breach of conduct principles.

Newspaper reports on 3 August quoted Cadet Regimental Commander William H. Geatches as declaring that he and his colleagues felt no sympathy for those found guilty of cheating in examinations. He noted that the disclosure of the violations was an indication of the strength of the Honor Code, not a sign of its weakness.

Later, there were reports that if the violators should be retained at West Point, the other Cadets would resign, so strong was the feeling among the latter group that the Code of Honor must not be degraded.

Immediately, the question was asked in sports circles whether or not the Military Academy would field a football team this Fall. Spokesmen at West Point said the answer was "yes," that schedule commitments would be fulfilled.

Charges were made by a group of the Cadets facing dismissal that more Cadets were involved than the 90 mentioned in the official statements. They contended also that the academic irregularities were a matter of long standing.

One of the Cadets who talked to newsmen at West Point was Bob Blaik, quarterback on the football team and son of the West Point football coach, Earl Blaik. Cadet Blaik did not say whether or not he was one of those involved, but he was quoted thusly:

"We were not allowed to notify our parents all over the country in advance. The first notice they got was from the newspapers and radio."

Among the group of Cadets who talked with the reporters was one who held that the "approximately 90" Cadets admitted the cheating and that others, equally guilty of breaking the Honor Code, denied this under oath. Another Cadet in the group said: "I'd rather have these men who told the truth lead me into battle than the others."

Two Cadets did tell reporters that they were involved. These Cadets were Harrison Travis and Ronald L. Clough, whose statements to reporters were made in the presence of Cadet Travis' father, Lt. Col. Harrison G. Travis, USA-Ret., USMA 1920.

Colonel Travis later sent a telegram to President Truman which declared that dismissal in disgrace and without trial would be a "travesty on the American idea of justice and a needless waste of the lives of these young men."

Colonel Travis' telegram, in which other parents concurred, stated that "your order restoring them to duty without prejudice subject to proper cadet discipline would be appropriate, charitable and a fatherly act of understanding and leadership."

The telegram called upon the President to make it possible for the Cadets "to repay in service to the Nation for the error of their youth."

Meantime, Coach Blaik, on Monday, 6 August, met with reporters and stated:

"In view of the number of athletes involved, I would welcome, if need be, a Congressional investigation, so that the true character of these boys and the true relationship of football to the Academy can be brought before the country."

"An investigation of this sort is deplorable. First, because of the unfavorable publicity it brings to the Academy. But it also is tragic because it pictures almost in the light of criminals some of the finest men we have in the Corps—the type of men whom the record shows have made the finest leaders."

On 7 Aug., General Irving made the following statement in which he denied allegations by some Cadets that there had been coercion and false promises during the interrogations. General Irving told also of the procedure being used in reviewing the cases. His statement follows:

"In answer to queries by the Press, regarding the announced violations of the honor code at West Point, the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy made the following statement:

"Each cadet when he was called before the Board of Investigation was specifically warned as required by law that he did not have to make any statement that would incriminate him, and that any statement he made could be used against him. Each member of the Board of Investigation has stated that during the investigation no coercion, no promises and no illegal methods were used. Furthermore all cadets examined by the Screening Board have had the opportunity to present any evidence of coercion or false promises arising out of their interrogation."

"The purpose of the final Screening Board, which is now in session, is to recall each cadet involved to give him full opportunity to submit anything he may have by way of explanation, mitigation, new or additional evidence, or extenuation of his case. Should any new substantial evidence involving additional cadets be brought to the attention of the Screening Board, the Board has been directed to investigate fully and to make appropriate recommendations. After review of each case by the Screening Board, the Board will recommend final action to the Superintendent."

"(Copy of the directive to the President of the Screening Board is attached to this statement.)"

"After this review by the Screening Board, final action may take any one of the following forms:

"a. Those cadets who have admitted guilt under oath will be given the opportunity to resign.

"b. Those cadets who have admitted guilt under oath, but who refuse to resign, will be discharged.

"c. In other cases cadets may be discharged administratively, or, at the discretion of the Superintendent, may be tried by Courts-martial depending on the evidence.

"d. In cases where insufficient evidence exists to support the charges of guilt, the charges will be dropped.

"Cadets who may be discharged from the U. S. Military Academy as a result of the foregoing action, will be discharged by administrative order, without specification as to character. This procedure has been used on occasion in honor cases in the past."

"SUBJECT: Directive.
"TO: Colonel H. C. Jones, President of the Board appointed by Par. 11, SO No. 153, USMA, dated 3 August 1951.

"I. The Board, of which you are President, is appointed to hear those cadets who previously appeared before the Board appointed by Letter Orders, U. S. Corps of Cadets, dated 28 May 1951, and were found or were suspected to have violated the Cadet Honor

Retirement Rank Objected To

The Department of Defense has recommended against enactment of a bill sponsored by Senator Martin (R-Pa.). "To advance officers and enlisted men on the retired lists of the Armed Forces to the highest grade for which they satisfactorily performed the duties in time of war."

Speaking for the Department of Defense, Rear Adm. G. L. Russell, USN, Judge Advocate General of the Navy, commented in the letter of disapproval: "It is doubtful that the expression 'duties of any higher grade than his grade on the retired list' as used in Section 1 could be defined for the purpose of implementing the proposed bill. At one time or another any member of the armed services, whether detailed for a specific duty, or by chance, may have performed at least in part the duties of a higher grade or rating than that which he holds. This has been particularly true in time of war when the responsibilities of all grades have been greater than in peace time. Generally it would be impossible to determine which personnel would qualify for advancement on the retired list and in the case of individuals whose entire service was satisfactory it might be impossible to determine who would not qualify for advancement."

The Department's letter did not offer any suggestions as to how the objective sought by Senator Martin might be achieved.

B-36 COST

The fly-away cost of a B-36 was put at $3.5 million during recent Congressional hearings.

Office of Naval Material

of Naval Material have been directed towards the following:

a. To establish procurement policies as authorized by additional Acts or Regulations permitting procuring activities to handle expeditiously the increased procurement program of the Navy.

b. To broaden the base of sources of supply for the production of military items.

c. To assist industry to expand its production capabilities so as to provide standby facilities which will be available to meet mobilization needs.

d. To continue industrial mobilization planning based upon the new mobilization base resulting from the augmentation of active forces in being.

Although the functions and responsibilities of the Office of Naval Material are many and varied, the areas of coordination and control are reasonably well defined. These areas are discussed herein.

Procurement

The procurement activities of the Navy fall within the classification of big business. There is no one commercial concern whose business affairs equal those of the Navy in scope, size, diversity or complexity.

In order to handle the volume of purchasing business, 59 major and minor purchasing activities are functioning to place Navy business with private industry. Ten major purchasing agencies are located in Washington—the six bureaus, the Military Sea Transportation Service, the Office of Naval Research, and the Marine Corps, as well as the Armed Services Petroleum Purchasing Agency. In the field there are seven Navy Purchasing Offices, four procuring Supply Demand Control Points and thirty-eight minor purchasing activities. In addition to these major and minor purchasing activities, there are attached to many of the ships and to all shore stations, Supply Officers who are authorized to procure in an emergency, or within established dollar limits.

The major and minor procuring activities were authorized, after the declaration of the National Emergency, to negotiate contracts under the authority of Section 2(c)1 of the Armed Services Procurement Act of 1947. This authority was granted in order to speed-up the placing of certain types of contracts and to broaden the industrial base. However, the formal advertisement method of procurement is still the most important in the Navy's procurement program.

Pursuant to policy guidance from the Secretary of Defense, the Navy has made it a general policy to broaden the industrial base by developing two or more sources for each important military item, whether purchased directly or on sub-contracts. The purpose of this policy is to (1) lessen dependence of military operations on a single source of supply, (2) promote competition and provide standards for determining reasonable prices and (3) increase the production potential for full mobilization.

Production

The Office of Naval Material is concerned with the three basic factors bearing upon production of military items: (1) adequacy of phased production schedules; (2) availability of facilities (plant and equipment) and materials; and (3) availability of manpower. The phased production schedules must accomplish two purposes: (1) provide a realistic statement of delivery needs to meet current requirements of the operating forces and (2) provide a forecast of delivery needs to meet mobilization requirements. These production schedules are developed by the Marine Corps and the bureaus and are subject to review by the Office of Naval Material to determine feasibility.

Insofar as possible, privately owned facilities and privately financed facilities are used to produce Navy requirements. In carrying out this policy, the Office of Naval Material assists industry to expand its facilities through the various legal means available, such as tax amortization, direct loans, guaranteed loans, advanced payments, etc. For the production of military end items, which have no counterpart in the civilian economy, it is generally necessary for the government to provide the facilities and thus, the Office of Naval Material passes judgment upon the necessity, adequacy, suitability, location and other pertinent factors pertaining to government financed plants and equipment.

With respect to materials, the Controlled Materials Plan, effective 1 July 1951, provides for the control of availability of three basic materials (steel, copper, and aluminum). This plan will assure that sufficient quantities of these basic materials are available to meet production requirements of the Armed Services. The Office of Naval Material consolidates the estimates of requirements of the Department of the Navy for these materials and submits such requirements to the Munitions Board in order that allotments may be made to the contractors at the time and in the amount needed to produce the items required by the Navy.

Exclusive of military manpower, the Navy employs a large number of civilian skilled workers of practically all categories. The maintenance of good labor relations is a primary coordinating responsibility of the Office of Naval Material.

Materials Review of Navy Requirements

In effecting coordination of the procurement and material programs of the Navy, one of the most important elements thereof, is the review of material requirements. This review is performed to insure conformance to specific operational objectives as promulgated by the Chief of Naval Operations as well as to determine the adequacy of production capabilities of industry to supply such requirements. Further, the material review of Navy requirements is one of the most important checks that is made to insure the maintenance of balance between material programs and most important to make certain that the Navy is utilizing the appropriated dollar to the best advantage.

Facilities

The Office of Naval Material performs a review of major construction projects and modification of existing facilities. This review takes cognizance of limited manpower and materials and stresses the need for constructing only those facilities essential for the support of operating forces and the maximum utilization of existing facilities in lieu of new construction. In addition, all proposals for acquisition, dispersal and outleasing of real and related personal property are also screened.

Material Control

The function of material control is subdivided into two important fields, namely, inventory control and cataloging. The Office of Naval Material provides policy direction for the Navy's inventory control program to insure that proper supply-demand relationships are maintained for all categories of material.

The Office of Naval Material is responsible for directing the implementation of the Navy's part in the Munitions Board Cataloging Program. This program, when completed, will be one of the important means of effectuating the required logistic support of the Naval Forces.

Inspection of Material

The procurement of military supplies and special military equipment generally requires that contracting officers be represented in the plants of private contractors for the inspection of material and related services. For the Navy this representation is provided by the Material Inspection Service of the Navy. The Office of Naval Material is responsible for exercising coordination control of the Inspection Service.

The Material Inspection Service is the Navy's primary point of contact with industry. In addition to the primary functions of the Inspection Service, the Field Inspectors perform many other valuable services, such as pre-award surveys of prospective contractors, expediting deliveries of material, etc. Further, the Material Inspectors serve to assist industry in breaking bottlenecks in production, security clearance of personnel, assist small business to be placed on bidders' lists and such other services as may be requested by industry.

Other Office of Naval Material Functions

In addition to the above described major functions of the Office of Naval Material, the Office exercises coordination responsibilities in other fields. For example, the Office formulates and promulgates policy and general procedures governing Insurance, Performance and Payment bonds. Further, the administration of the Navy Department Board of Contract Appeals is vested in the Office of Naval Material. This Board handles contractors' appeals to contract decisions pertaining to Navy contracts. Finally, the Office of Naval Material promulgates policy and coordinates Navy Department action with respect to contract termination, property disposal, and standards and specifications.

As indicated by the description of the various functions, the Office of Naval Material has an important role in the operations of the Department of the Navy. The coordinating efforts of the Office of Naval Material over policies and procedures under which the Marine Corps and Bureaus carry on their business activities, result, in the end, in assuring that full logistic support is provided the Naval Operating Forces both afloat and ashore.

New Plan for Reserves

Hearings on a new Armed Forces Reserve Bill, designed to iron out many of the alleged inequities of the current Reserve structure, were completed this week in the House. Defense Department officials gave full support to the measure, but the National Guard Association offered strong opposition.

Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh, President of the National Guard declared that should the bill be enacted "it would very definitely relegate the Army and Air National Guard to the inferior position which the National Guard occupied prior to 1903." He said the Guard would "cease to exist" and would "be superseded by a Federal Militia."

The National Guard Association cited seven specific objections to the bill and offered a long list of amendments.

Introduced by Representative Overton Brooks (D-Ia.), also chairman of the subcommittee which held hearings on the proposed legislation, the bill (HR 4860) is drafted to accompany plans for Universal Military Training.

Others heard were: Col. A. B. McMullen, USAFR, Executive Director, Air Reserve Association; Brig. Gen. E. A. Evans, Executive Director, Reserve Officers Association; and Mr. Adin M. Downer, Assistant Legislative Representative, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Colonel McMullen "strongly" recommended adoption of the bill but suggested several amendments including provisions for "an Assistant Secretary in each military department whose primary duty shall be the coordination and administration of Reserve matters," as well as a promotion system for Reserves to be "established by law in the same manner as it is for the Regular Forces."

General Evans testified that the ROA wishes "to see a maximum written into law; while the Pentagon apparently wishes to have a minimum, thereby leaving a large portion of our problems to be settled administratively." He also recommended the establishment of assistant service secretaries for Reserve matters.

Mr. Downer said that the Veterans of Foreign Wars "unhesitatingly recommend the passage of HR 4860," but suggested that "the reservist on active duty be given all the rights and benefits extended to the regular personnel."

Buy Super-Constellations

Announcement by Air France of purchase of a fleet of Super Constellations brought disclosure by the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation this week of the largest commercial backlog in the company's history, approximately $100,000,000 in orders, all for the big new luxury liner and all of them placed before the first Super Constellation flew.

Simultaneously with the Air France announcement by Mr. Henri J. Lesieur, general manager of the North American and Caribbean division, that the French worldwide airliner had ordered 10 Super Constellations to cost $15,000,000, Mr. Robert E. Gross, Lockheed president, said the military backlog of orders for the big new transport was even greater than the commercial backlog. He said that the total backlog of nearly a quarter-billion dollars before the first flight of the first production airplane last month was a record in aviation.

The airlines in order of deliveries are Eastern Air Lines, whose president, Captain E. V. Rickenbacker, recently announced purchase of 30 Super Constellations and plans for conversion of the fleet to propjet power; Trans World Airlines, presently the largest Constellation operator in the world, which ordered 10 of the bigger transports and is negotiating for additional numbers; Royal Dutch Airlines (KLM), whose Constellations now travel to many parts of the world, awaiting delivery of 9; Air France with an order for 10 luxury liners, and Pakistan International, which is starting its Super Constellation fleet with 3 airplanes.

New De-Icing System

The Navy's AD-Skyraider has a new and improved pneumatic de-icing system that rubber engineers say is more efficient than any previous systems in breaking heavy ice formations and is capable of withstanding the high speed of this attack bomber without coming loose from the wing surfaces.

Designed by the B. F. Goodrich company in collaboration with the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics and Douglas engineers at El Segundo, Calif., the new method involves a shorter cycle of pulsation that produces faster ice-breaking action.

The expanding tubes were reduced to one and one-quarter inches in width and the air pressure increased from 7 to 15 pounds per square inch. A solenoid manifold system provides the pressure and vacuum for speedier inflation and deflation.

88th Division Reunion

The 88th Infantry Division Association will hold its Fourth Annual Reunion in Washington, D. C., on 16, 17, 18 and 19 Aug. at the Hotel Shoreham.

Climax of the ceremonies will be the banquet on Saturday evening 18 Aug., at which Maj. Gen. Paul W. Kendall, USA, former Division Commander in combat, will deliver the feature address. General Kendall has just returned from Austria to assume command of VI Corps at Camp Atterbury, Ind.

Glenn L. Martin Financing

The Glenn L. Martin Company of Baltimore, Md., has arranged a $10,000,000 V-loan to provide additional working capital for the financing of its expanding military production, C. C. Pearson, president and general manager, announced this week in releasing the Company's financial report for the first six months of 1951.

The Martin Company's backlog of undelivered orders at the end of the first half of 1951 exceeded $414,000,000, he said. This compares with a backlog figure of $94,000,000 at 30 June 1950.

The report also showed sales of $16,747,026 for the first six months of 1951 as compared with $16,582,702 of sales for the first half of 1950. Income before adjustment of inventory valuation amounted to $509,860 for the six months ended 30 June, as compared with net income of $872,901 for the comparable 1950 period.

"A Soldier's Story"

(A Soldier's Story, by General Omar N. Bradley; Henry Holt and Company, 617pp, $5.00.)

The general who commanded more troops in action than any other leader in the history of warfare, has written a fascinating and informal account of American participation in the great African and European campaigns of World War II. General Omar N. Bradley, USA, now Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in his new book of war memoirs, released by the publishers this week, tells an intimate story of military operations in North Africa, in Sicily, and in the invasion of the European continent and the subsequent masterful drive that liberated France and the Low Countries and insured the defeat of Nazi Germany.

In North Africa and Sicily General Bradley was head of an army corps, in the Normandy landings he led a field army, and in France and Germany he commanded an Army Group that reached a strength of four field armies and 1,300,000 troops. He conceived, planned and executed Operation Cobra, the daring and masterful maneuver that enabled the American armies to break out of the Normandy beachhead and begin the brilliantly successful drive that swept to the Rhine in a few months.

General Bradley's story of these colossal operations is told in simple but vivid language. Since the book is primarily for non-professional readers, the author very properly avoids the use of formal military phraseology. Further, to make the story more acceptable to more than a million veterans whom he commanded in battle, General Bradley often—possibly too often—resorts to the rough parlance of the barracks. This may seem to many as oddly out of character for this quiet, unassuming and dignified general, whose brilliance in battle is exceeded only by his innate modesty.

Many readers will be specially interested in the general's frank appraisal of the professional qualifications and idiosyncrasies of top British and American commanders with whom he was so closely associated in battle. His revelation of friction with Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein has already focused international attention on command controversies, which apparently left General Bradley with at least a trace of residual resentment.

While it is obvious that the American commander of the Twelfth Army Group is not a devoted admirer of the British leader, he is objective in his criticism of the colorful field marshal and is quick to credit him with great professional ability and with magnetic leadership.

If the British resent General Bradley's frankness in expressing his opinion of their war hero, they may find some slight satisfaction in his unfavorable comments concerning such popular American commanders as General George S. Patton, Jr., Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, and Maj. Gen. Terry de la M. Allen. Many friends of General Bradley will probably regret that he found it necessary to include in his book adverse criticism of a few general officers of long and distinguished service to the country.

Quite apart from the discussion of personal and professional characteristics of a small number of individuals, the general's book is an excellent narrative, containing accurate and enlightening details of some of the most important military operations in the world's history. The reasoning behind the staff planning and command decisions, made when the fog of war obscured much essential information, is clearly stated, and should prove highly informative both to the professional soldier and the average citizen.

The great battles that shaped the destiny of civilization are so vividly and effectively described that they will have a new meaning to soldier and civilian alike. Even the participants in these earth-shaking conflicts will learn many new details in reading of the progress of the campaigns as viewed by the high command. The book's literary excellence, its refreshing candor, and its obvious authenticity make A Soldier's Story one of the very best of the many volumes written concerning World War II.

The officers of the various sections are as follows: Nurse Corps Section—Maj. Dorothy C. MacLeod, Chief Nurse, Veterans Administration, president; Women's Medical Specialist Corps Section—Col. Emergency Leave Bill

The Defense Department has indicated a lack of interest in a bill (HR 3247) which would provide emergency leave for members of the Armed Forces outside the continental United States in the event of a death in the members family.

The bill was introduced by Representative Carl Elliott (D., Ala.) last March.

In a report submitted through Army Secretary Frank Pace, the Department said that it believed the "existing law is adequate" and that members of the Armed Forces are not "experiencing hardships or suffering privations incident to authorized leave, emergency or otherwise."

In his report, Mr. Pace said: "At the present time military personnel in overseas areas are being granted leaves for compassionate reasons and are being transported expeditiously to a point of entry in the United States at Government expense. If the serviceman is without funds at the time of emergency leave he may obtain unsecured, non-interest bearing loans to cover transportation costs, which are readily available through the American Red Cross or agencies such as Army Emergency Relief. In appropriate cases of Army personnel, for example, small grants may be made outright from Army Emergency Relief Funds."

"The record does not show that members of the Armed Forces are experiencing hardships or suffering privations incident to authorized leave, emergency or otherwise. This may be attributable to the action on the part of the railroad companies which have reduced rates for military personnel while on leave, and to the further fact that, while on authorized leave, members of the Armed Forces continue to receive their pay and allowances."

Bill Passed to Build Subs

Amended legislation which authorizes the Navy to construct two experimental submarines at a cost of 50 million dollars was approved 2 Aug. by the House.

Introduced by Representative Lansdale G. Sasser (D., Md.), the bill (HR 1227) gives the Navy an additional 20 million dollars over the original request to build the two new undersea prototypes.

Mr. Sasser said the vessels will include all of the study and advances Navy scientific research has made in under-surface warfare including the latest devices, weapons and equipment.

Check on Armed Services

Another committee to investigate the Armed Services was launched this week. In accordance with a resolution adopted by the House, Chairman Vinson of the Armed Services Committee named the following members to an investigative subcommittee:

The committee is empowered to conduct such studies and investigations as it deems necessary to determine (a) whether or not Armed Forces personnel are being utilized efficiently, and (b) whether or not the services are employing excessive numbers of civilian employees.

Submarine For Target

In response to the request of the Department of Defense, Representative Vinson, (D-Ga), chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services, this week introduced a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to use the incomplete submarine ULUA as a target for underwater explosion tests.

In submitting the legislation Assistant Secretary Edwards stated: "The proposed tests have become essential as a matter of the highest priority in connection with the ship construction program of the Department of the Navy. In particular, research data are needed as to shock resistance of new type equipment prior to awards of contracts for this equipment which will be installed in new type construction."

"It was decided that this command cannot spare the army players from their military duties," the general said. Training requirements delegated to this base by higher command has necessitated full use of manpower available, General Steele explained.
